SALT SAN PEDRO.

All Quiet at the Seat of War, Just Now,

But with Chances That Fun Will Be a-Popping Soon.

An Encounter Between Strikers and Capt. Brown.

Brown Paralyzes His Foe—Meeting at Crocker's Hall Last Night—A Compromise Proposed—The Strikers' Claims—The Situation Up to Date.

The situation at San Pedro is still very threatening. The Knights of Labor have joined the striking seamen, and the latter are much encouraged. Early yesterday morning the strikers turned out 200 strong, and marched around the streets, while about thirty officers watched them. Six men were appointed to visit all the ships in the harbor, and try to induce them to allow the sailors go ashore without any trouble. They separated and a hard-looking "mug" named Joe Quinn, walked down the wharf until he reached a schooner commanded by Capt. Brown. Quinn began to talk to the men, when Brown ordered him away. He refused to move and a savage quarrel took place. Finally Brown threw up his right hand and beckoned several deputy sheriffs to come to his assistance. Quinn noticed the motion and made a break for Brown. He had a fellow with him named George Terna, who also showed fight, and the two were about to get the better of Brown, when that gentleman gathered up a big scantling and struck Quinn a powerful blow over the head. He would have brained him on the spot, but Quinn threw his hand up and warded off the blow. As he fell Brown struck him again, and a number of strikers were near at hand, but before they could interfere Quinn was laid out, and Terna started off on the dead-run. Brown attempted to stop him and fired one shot. Several deputy sheriffs rushed up and both Quinn and Terna were placed under arrest. They were brought to this city by Deputy Sheriff Russell last night and placed in the County Jail. Before leaving San Pedro, Quinn swore out a complaint charging Brown with assault to kill. Sheriff Kays was notified of what had occurred, and last night he sent Under Sheriff Mitchell and three additional deputies down.

"He now has about thirty men down there, and says that he will put down the strike even if he has to call out every man in the country who can bear arms. The two men were seen at the County Jail by a TIMES reporter last night. They are very bitter against the Pacific Coast Steamship Company and the lumber men, and say the strike will be kept up as long as they persist in refusing to comply with the union's request to pay better wages. Last night several hundred dodgers were distributed about the streets of Los Angeles. They read as follows:

"To All Laboring Men and Whom It May Concern: We call the attention of the public to the fact that the Executive Board of A. D. 140, K. of L., has approved the strike in San Pedro, by calling the balance of their men out.

"Furthermore, that C. S. Union of the Pacific Coast has ordered its members out of their respective vessels at said port. All sailors and laboring men are respectively asked to stay away."

ON THE SPOT.

A TIMES reporter was detailed to visit the field of more or less imminent war, and went down to San Pedro last evening. The following telegram was received from him last night:

SAN PEDRO, Dec. 3.—[Special.] Everything is quiet in San Pedro tonight. Early in the evening the streets were full of men, but they were in the main orderly, and there was no apparent disposition among the men to indulge in violence. There was considerable indignation among the men ing one of the men who is out. Under over the action of one of the officers in strik- Sheriff Mitchell and Deputy Marshal Hayes came down on the evening train. There are also a number of deputies on duty, but so far there has been no demand for their services. At 8 o'clock tonight a conference was held at Crocker's Hall between the strikers and Under-Sheriff Mitchell, at which was also present W. L. Woolfe, district officer of the Knights of Labor. The matters in dispute were discussed, and the members of the union disclaimed any idea of violence, and said that they did not wish to have any of any description, but only want their rights. They said that the present strike was not on a question of wages, but because the Ship-owners' Association and lumber companies had denied work to union men. Efforts are now in progress looking to a compromise, and it is believed here that they will be successful. As before stated, at this writing everything is quiet. P.

WOLFE'S STATEMENT.

W. L. Woolfe, one of the officers of the Knights of Labor, who has spent several days looking into the cause of the strike, was seen by the TIMES reporter at San Pedro, and stated that he believed the strikers to be in the right. He says there are about 350 men on the strike. Some of them are Knights of Labor, but he found a number of Knights at work. He says the strike was started by "Longshoremen Junior," a recently organized union, and that the Knights have had nothing to do with it. He found that the Ship-owners' Association had employed an attorney named Savage to spot all union men and have them discharged. The lumber men and ship owners have combined forces against the laborers to force all laborers to go to sea. He is also of the opinion that the Southern Pacific Railroad Company has a finger in the pie, and that all of them are trying to break up the Sailors' Union. All of the Knights of Labor sailors who have positions were ordered to give up their positions if they think of joining the Sailor's Union.

All of the Knights who had not struck were ordered out by the Executive Board yesterday morning. This order was issued for the reason that the Knights do not believe that any one has the right to dictate what societies they shall or shall not join. As long as the Sailors' Union is out on a strike, the Knights deem it their duty to stand by them. Mr. Wolfe is of the opinion that there will be serious trouble before the matter is settled.

A Good Sale.

The Nadeau Vineyard sale yesterday aggregated $35,000 to $40,000. All the property that was offered sold at reasonable prices, averaging from $350 to $1200 an acre. A large number of persons, crowding six coaches, enjoyed the excursion, and many buyers were from the newly-arrived home-seekers. Matlock & Son were the auctioneers, and conducted a satisfactory sale.

A STRANGE CASE.

A Boy Shot and Wounded by an Old Man.

A mysterious shooting scrape occurred last night, a few minutes past 9 o'clock. Frank Bruzette, a 15-year-old son of Dr. E. F. Bruzette, and George Bush were walking through the alleyway that leads from the north corner of the Fort-street M. E. Church to Hill street. When the two boys had gone about half way through the alley Frank stooped down, remorking:

"I guess I've found a 10-cent piece."

George took a step or two before he stopped, and as he did so he said:

"I guess it's a twenty."

Just at that moment a man, who had walked a few feet behind them, jumped forward, and, without uttering a word, he placed a pistol a few inches from Frank's head and pulled the trigger. The youth was just rising to his feet, but he fell to the ground and partly turned on the would-be murderer. The shooter wheeled around as soon as he fired and ran for Fort street as fast as his legs would carry him. Frank picked himself up, and the two boys made their way to Dr. Bruzette's house as fast as possible. The young man was covered with blood from an ugly-looking wound in the right side of his face. He and his companion were badly frightened, and his parents could get but little out of them for several minutes, or until Frank's wounds had been examined. The bullet from the assassin's pistol struck him just back of the right ear, and glanced around under the ear, plowing an ugly gash in the cheek. It proved to be only a flesh wound, and is not at all dangerous, although it is very painful. A TIMES reporter was soon on the ground, and attempted to learn the true inwardness of the strange shooting, but without very good results, as no one seemed to know why the boy should have been assaulted in such a murderous fashion. In answer to a question, he said:

"I am working at E. Levy's, the cigar man, at No. 42 North Main street. During the past few weeks my employer has been in San Francisco, and I have been in the habit of bringing quite a sum of money home with me every night; but Levy returned day before yesterday, and I did not have any money with me this evening. My friend Bush generally walked home with me, and the man who shot me must have seen him, for he was standing right in front of me, and some of the powder burned him. No, I haven't an enemy in the city. In fact, I do not know more than two young men. We have only been here a few months, and I have not had time to get acquainted. When he shot me I turned around, but I could not see his face, for he was running from me. He wore a light slouch hat and a dark overcoat. He was a short, heavy set man. I think he was walking close behind us when we turned from Fort street into the alley, but I did not pay any attention to him. I have never had a fight or any trouble since I came to Los Angeles."

The robbery theory is rather thin, for the reason that highwaymen are not in the habit of shooting people before they hail them, so the reporter began to cast about for a more plausable theory. He learned that on Thurday night, during the rain storm, that a row which attracted the attention of several neighbors took place in one of the houses on Hill streets near the alley, but no one could tell exactly which house it was in. A female voice was heard to cry out:

"Oh, papa, for God's sake don't kill him."

Almost immediately after that someone ran from the house, and a chair flew out after him, and the disturbance came to a sudden ending. It is thought that this trouble had something to do with the shooting last night, and that Frank Bruzette was mistaken for someone else. Up to a late hour last night the police had not succeeded in capturing the shootist.

Cock of the Roost.

Officer Lynch walked into the police station last night with J. Williams in tow. Williams was caught in the act of beating one of the abandoned women on Los Angeles street. After his arrest Williams attacked the officer, but was soon brought to terms and came along. He made the air sultry with the most obscene language and horrid abuse of the officer.

IT WAS ARSON.

The Burning of the Club Stables.

A Belated Typo Sees Two Roughly Dressed Men Set the Fire.

They Escape Before He Knows What They Have Done.

An Atrocious Crime, Whose Perpetrators Should Be Detected and Punished—A Fire Which Blazed Up Like a Powder Magazine.

The origin of the terrible fire on Los Angeles street night before last—in which three-score fine horses were consumed, along with other valuable property—was at first shrouded in mystery. The lateness of the hour precluded investigation that night, and nothing more definite than theories of all sorts were advanced. It is now learned that the fire was incendiary, and that there was at least one witness to the atrocious crime. F. L. MacCarty, an intelligent compositor in THE TIMES news-room, was enjoying a night off, Friday night. He was walking along Second street below Los Angeles, when he noticed two men back of Covarrubias' stable lighting matches and shuffling papers. His first thought was that they were trying to set the place afire. They were so bold, however, and so guiltless of any attempt at concealment, that he concluded, they must be merely lighting their pipes or doing some other harmless thing. He watched them many minutes, it being moonlight. There was considerable wind, and their matches kept going out. He finally got tired of watching them, and walked over to the other side of the street. Thereupon one of the men came out toward him and passed within a few feet of him; then, getting toward the corner, ran like a deer down Los Angeles street. He was a very short, heavy-set fellow, with rough clothes and a light, soft hat. He looked like a laborer of the lowest class.

Mr. MacCarty then immediately walked over to the barn, about 100 yards from where he had been standing. The fellow who had remained there suddenly disappeared; and as MacCarty approached the barn he saw a tiny glow like a live coal or a little lamp. Before he could cover the hundred yards the huge building burst out in a volcano of flame. It was so rapid that it seemed almost like an explosion of coal oil. He could see nothing more of the fire-bugs, and turned his attention to tying tossave something from the stable. The flames were too swift, however, for anything to be done. The men who were sleeping in the stable barely escaped with their lives. MacCarty, from a commanding point, saw the terrified horses running about madly, until they succumbed to the devouring flames, and says it was the most heartrending sight he ever witnessed.

It is supposed that the incendiaries were laborers who had a grudge against Mr. Covarrubias, for having been discharged, or for some other reason. There is no clew to their identity. Mr. MacCarty probably would not recognize them if he saw them again.

VISITING THE RUINS.

Hundreds of people visited the scene of the fire yesterday to look at the sickening pile of dead horses. The losses given in THE TIMES yesterday were about correct, and will reach almost $200,000. The insurance on the horses and rolling-stock was merely nominal. Some of the citizens who had horses and carriages in the stable were insured for small amounts, but the insurance will not even replace the carriages. Fruhling Bros. carried only $350 on their first frame building, and $100 on their tools and material.

HARLAN'S PARENTS.

In a Critical Condition from Grief at His Death.

A reliable newspaper man at Danville, Ind., where the wife of the murdered Dr. C. N. Harlan now is, writes to THE TIMES as follows, under date of November 28th:

"This is the old home of Dr. C. N. Harlan; here he spent his school days, grew up to manhood and married. Up to that time he had led an exemplary life. After his marriage—well, please to excuse me from a discussion of his life during that period. Suffice to say that, his wife having considerable wealth, and allowing him the use of it, he went wrong instanter; he could not stand prosperity."

The parents of Dr. C. N. Harlan, lately murdered near Los Angeles, who reside in Danville, Ind., and who have been almost heart-broken since the news of the death of their son, will probably not survive the terrible shock. Mrs. Harlan is now near death's door, and no thought is entertained of her recovery, while Dr. J. B. Harlan, father of the murdered man, is so feeble that the news from the family physician stating that his wife could not recover completely prostrated him. They are among the most highly-respected citizens of their community.

A Case for Risley.

The police are doing the work that properly comes under the jurisdiction of United States Marshal Risley. During the past few months smugglers and cattle of that kind have been running things with a high hand in this city, in the way of selling unstamped cigars. The police have been camping on their trail, and last night Officer Van Luven captured Joseph Marcoux. The little Frenchman was caught in the very act. He was lodged in the City Prison, and will be turned over to the Marshal tomorrow.

A Broken Shaft.

The freight steamer Los Angeles was disabled at Carpinteria wharf, below Santa Barbara, Friday afternoon, by the breaking of the main shaft. She will be towed to San Francisco by the Queen on her way north, where the necessary repairs will be made.

IN SOCIETY.

"INTER NOS" COTILLION AT THE ELLIS RESIDENCE.

A Pleasant Progressive Euchre Party—Reunion of Kansans—The Swift-Loel and Todd-Baker Weddings—Other Society Events.

Below will be found a brief review of the principal society events of the week:

THE "INTER NOS" ENTERTAINED.

A most charming party was that given by Mrs. C. J. Ellis, on Friday evening, to the subscribers of the "Inter Nos" cotillions. At the last german, a fortnight ago, a cordial invitation was extended to all to hold the next meeting at her beautiful home, and on Friday night, shortly after 8, the carriages began to arrive, the occupants of which feasted their eyes on the fairy-like spectacle of the grounds, in which were hosts of Chinese lanterns, giving the appearance of some of the famous European gardens. The interior of the house was no less attractive, with the combined light of candles, gas and lamps, a profusion of flowers, canvased floors, and a background of the artistic decoration in which the house abounds. The host and hostess received the guests in the main corridor, after which greetings they could go at will to the inviting fireside and card-tables of the library, or the drawing-rooms cleared for dancing, the music for which was furnished by Meine's orchestra. There was a programme of eight dances, which, when completed shortly after 10, was followed by an elaborate supper, when the german was inaugurated and four or five delightful figures were danced under the able leadership of Mr. H. J. Fleishman. It was long after 1 o'clock when the last waltz was announced, after which adieus were said and the fortunate guests of this pleasurable entertainment sought their respective homes. Among the guests were Gen. and Mrs. Miles, Mrs. G. W. King, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Rose, Dr. and Mrs. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. J. Downey Harvey, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cook, Mrs. Damarin, Miss Frankie King, Miss Hollingshead, Miss Fannie Wells, Miss Belle Macdonald, Miss Georgia Mott, Miss Dell O'Melveny, Miss Cora Tubbs, Miss Virginia Bereman, Miss Neal, Miss Louise Jones, Miss Lena Mudge, Miss Catherine Stoneman, Miss Briggs, Miss Flowersee, Misses Mullins, Miss Daisy Rose; Dr. W. L. Wills, Lieut. McCaleb, Messrs. Alfred Larkin, C. F. Sloane, C. B. Mudge, F. J. Thomas, Barrett Eastman, H. G. Wilshire, C. Vogelsang, H. J. Fleishman, J. Patrick, J. N. Brown, F. Harndon, Arthur Bent, C. J. Burns, Clark Reddick, B. G. Stoneman, Du Bois Knight, Ed Neal and Fred Griffiths.

A number of congenial souls met over the perennial progressive euchre tables at Mrs. Charles de Sgigethy's house, on York street, near Figueroa, on Wednesday evening last, and a most pleasant evening was passed, with cards, music and a delicious little supper. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Plater, with their nieces, the Misses Waddilove, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Friesner, Mr. and Mrs. Newton, Miss Childs and her brother, O. W. Childs, Jr., Miss O'Melveny, Miss Jones, Dr. Wills and Miss Fannie Wills, Mr. C. F. Sloane, Mr. C. B. Mudge, Mr. C. J. Burns and others, were the fortunate recipients of the entertainment.

M'PHERSON REUNION.

Last Wednesday night a rather novel gathering occurred at the house of Dr. and Mrs. W. Murphy of Boyle Heights. All or nearly all of the jovial party present were happy exiles from McPherson, Kan., and had met to congratulate one another upon the fact of their present comfortable and unanimous state. 'Twas not that they loved McPherson less, but that they loved Los Angeles more. The hosts made them welcome in social and material fashion, and were themselves gracefully presented with a gift both costly and useful ere the departure of their guests, among whom were Hon. M. P. Simpson and wife, T. L. Hartup and wife, A. A. Irvin and wife, Dr. and Mrs. N. H. Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. George Crowe, Messrs. Teale, Wolf, McClure, Dunham and others.

THE SWIFT-LOEL WEDDING.

Last Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, was celebrated the marriage of Miss Annie Swift to Mr. Fred J. Loel. Both young people have but recently come to this city, but a group of relatives, old-time friends and one or two new ones, gathered by their invitation to wish them good-speed. The ceremony was performed by Rev. John Boal, and was brief but binding. After congratulations the guests were served with some inward refreshings, and at a late hour the young couple went to their own home, which had been beforehand cosily fitted for them by their own efforts and the gifts of friends. Those present at the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Swift, Miss Swift, Mr. Charles Swift, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Boal, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Boal, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Roads, Miss MacIntosh, and Messrs. C. F. Lummis, Parker Hancock, Van Horn, Montgomery and Chambers.

THE TODD-BAKER WEDDING.

On last Monday evening, at the home of the bride, on Second street, were united in marriage Miss Lillian Todd and Mr. Fred Baker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Baker of Buena Vista street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Weller, and was witnessed by the intimate friends of the parties. Both are well known and much liked here, and have hosts of well-wishers. The wedding journey was San Diego-ward.

THE OXYMEL CLUB.

On last Monday night the Oxymels met at the residence of Miss Laux, on South Fort street. The subject of the evening was "Victor Hugo," and this large man was treated of in a fitting manner. An adorer of music himself, his appointed evening was well celebrated by some fine music, on the piano by the hostess, on the flute by Walter McQuillen, songs by Miss Lillian Fellows, and on the violin by a pair of bright little Italians, introduced by Mr. Rollins.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Club was held at room No. 3, Armory Hall, yesterday afternoon. After the usual business preliminaries were finished, a paper, brief but thoughtful, was read by Mrs. White, upon the character and present life of Count Leon Folstoi, the wonderful Russian ascetic and writer. Some discussion of the man, his ideas and his books followed, after which the club adjourned.

DEUTSCHE UNTERHALTUNG.

About twenty of Herr Arnold Kutner's German students gathered last Tuesday evening at the parlors of Mrs. John Ellis for their weekly German "Unterhaltung." The conversation was carried on exclusively in German. The following programme was rendered:

Adagio, (Weber).
Prose reading, (Grimm).
Song, (Rubinstein).
Das Schloss am Meer, (Uhland).
Song, (Rubinstein).
Hans Euler, (Swind).

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE CLUB.

The large and pleasant parlors at 314 South Spring street were crowded last Tuesday evening with guests of the Woman Suffrage Club. Messrs. Gould, Hoyt and Gosper each made a short, pointed and excellent speech in favor of equal suffrage.

Mrs. Grosvenor read about half of Col. T. W. Higginson's speech at the annual convention of the American Woman Suffrage Association, recently held in Philadelphia. Miss Lyford told "what Samantha Allen thought about the matter." Dr. Atwater gave a chapter from her rich store of experiences, Miss Cowles recited an original poem and Mrs. Kingsbury made a few timely and appropriate remarks. In addition to this the occasion was enlivened with fine music by three talented performers, and altogether the evening was spent in a pleasant and profitable manner.

Society Briefs and Personals.

Miss May Treat of the Sierra Madre Sanitarium was in the city on Saturday.

Mr. W. A. Taylor of the Hotel Ammidon has gone to San Francisco for ten days.

Mr. Alfred Larkin is in the city for a few days with the view of making this place his home.

Miss Maggie Cole of Ashland, Ky., is a guest at the home of Capt. Meredith of East Los Angeles.

Miss Wheatly, the charming guest of the Misses Millins of Barnard Park, returned to her home at San Diego on Wednesday last.

Miss Alexander and Miss Wade, the latter lady a sister of her hostess, are visiting Mrs. R. W. Poindexter at her home on Adams street.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Truslow and daughter, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Parsons, at the West End, went to Santa Barbara yesterday morning.

Mrs. Katherine Hooper of East Los Angeles, returned on Monday last from San Francisco, bringing with her Miss Whitney, her aunt, who was her guest a few months ago.

Mr. Henry Thatcher and sister, two well-known young society people of Chillicothe, O., arrived here on Thursday morning, and will remain here and at Pasadena until spring.

"The Raymond" is the scene of much social gaiety, especially was it so during the last week, euchre, donkey and birthday parties flourishing successfully in rapid sequence.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Downey Harvey have returned from San Francisco. Mr. Harvey, showing an interesting pallor, declares himself quite recovered, to his own and his friends' satisfaction.

Miss Carrie Waddilove arrived here last Monday for a visit to her aunt, Mrs. J. E. Plater, and to be present at the ball set for December 8th, invitations to which have been sent out by Mrs. Plater during the past week.

Dr. George Taylor Stewart, a rising young physician, arrived in Los Angeles the middle of the week to look for office and residence accommodations. If successful he will send for his charming wife, nee Miss May Fargo, and reside here permanently.

Mrs. Betts, mother of Mrs. C. T. Parsons, who has been spending several months with her daughter in New York, will return to the city during the week, called home by the loss of her beloved grandson, Beaumont Parsons. Her daughter in New York, Miss Carrie Betts, the contralto singer, who has been studying with Cappiani, will return after the Xmas holidays, doubtless with well-earned vocal honors.

The denizens of "Red Roof," Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cook, Messrs. Sloane, Mudge, Brown et al., after indefatigable and superhuman search, have found a local habitation in the comfortable and capacious house belonging to Mrs. Mary Morton of San Gabrial, just south of the Crocker mansion, on Olive street. The friends of the Red Roofers, who have spent so many and oft an hour of pleasure there, and who "rejoiced with trembling" at the expected arrival and installation there of Mark Sibley Severance, are now content, and may owe a peaceful allegiance to the old and the new homes.

AN EARNEST QUESTION

As to Gentlemen and Their Attire—Bluett & Sullivan.

Say what you will about a gentleman not being made by his tailor, the fact remains that his appearance depends on his tailor to a very great extent, and men are apt to be taken for what they appear in this world. If your tailor introduces you as a gentleman, therefore, the world accepts you as a gentleman, and you have the advantage of a good start, which is said to be half the battle.

And while this subject is under discussion, it comes to mind that a first-class clothing and gentlemen's furnishing establishment performs the office of a great many tailors and of some other people besides. With the joint efforts of such a concern, a bath-keeper, a shoemaker and a barber, the veriest tramp in appearance may be transformed in an hour into a seeming gentleman. Whether he maintain that character or not depends upon his inherent worth. But that is neither here nor there. The principal question is, Where can the best clothing and gentleman's furnishing establishment be found? If you seek this boon in Los Angeles the natural answer is Bluett & Sullivan's, on the corner of Spring and First streets. The merest tyro in passing this place would know from its appearance that it is a first-class establishment. The elegant gilded columns of the front, the impressive new signs on the First-street side betoken a house of enterprise and taste; and it requires both enterprise and taste to carry on a good clothing and furnishing establishment.

This house was established four years ago in quarters just below its present location, in Nadeau block. The firm was then Bluett, Daly & Sullivan. Subsequently Mr. Daly retired, entering upon the profession of the law, and he is now our efficient City Attorney, and one of the best Los Angeles has ever had.

Mr. Bluett, who is a veteran clothing merchant of Chicago, having been in the business there thirty years, stood by the helm of the mercantile establishment, and, with the vigorous support of his younger associate, Mr. Sullivan, piloted it into the waters of great prosperity. The firm carries a stock of from $75,000 to $100,000, filling chuck-a-block a storeroom 30 feet front, 80 feet deep and 50 feet broad at the rear. In excellence of quality and great variety from which to choose no other clothing and furnishing house in the city offers such attractions. Bluett & Sullivan are the originators here of the one-price system, and they maintain it throughout their dealings. A force of ten clerks is kept constantly employed waiting on the customers who keep the store crowded the greater part of the day. The house certainly does an immense business.

Bluett & Sullivan have lately refitted their store, adding a great convenience in the form of a Lampson cash carrier, which works like a charm.

If you want to be well treated and get the best the market affords, drop in and see Bluett & Sullivan.

B. of L. E. Ball.

The fifth annual ball of Orange Grove Lodge No. 9, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, was held at Armory Hall Friday night. There was a good attendance, and the best of order was maintained. SOCIAL SUCKERS.

THE ILLINOIS REUNION HELD FRIDAY EVENING.

A Big Crowd and a Jolly Time—The Interesting Programme—President Hoyt's Entertaining Address—A Pleasant Social Power.

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Illinois Society was held Friday evening at Good Templars' Hall on Main street. The hall was crowded, and the exercises were of an unusually interesting character. It was resolved to hereafter hold regular weekly meetings in order to enable the members of the society to have a better opportunity for becoming acquainted with each other and to promote good fellowship among the Illinois colony. The programme was one of the most attractive that has yet been presented, and contained several notable features. The guitar-playing of Prof. Delano was exceptionally good, and called for repeated encores. The address of the president, Ralph E. Hoyt, describing his recent trip East, was enthusiastically received, and, on motion, it was unanimously resolved to have the address published in full in one of the morning daily papers. The programme was divided by a recess of fifteen minutes, during which there was a social reunion of the members, devoted to conversation and a general interchage of ideas. The following is the programme in full:

FIRST PART.

Piano Duet—Misses Stilson and Houser.
Song—Mrs. Stella Mathews.
Address, "A Trip East"—Ralph E. Hoyt.
Piano Solo—Charles Ward.
Recess of fifteen minutes.

PART SECOND.

Piano Solo—Miss Bennett.
Guitar Solo—Prof. C. S. Delano.
Recitation—Mr. Ryan.
Piano Solo—Miss Emery.
Song—Mrs. Sanderson.

PRESIDENT HOYT'S SPEECH.

Following is the Address Made by President Ralph E. Hoyt.

Ladies and Gentlemen: By request of the committee I am expected at this particular crisis in our affairs, to make a few remarks concerning my recent trip to and experiences in the East. On the evening of September 9th, in company with a large party of one, I left this city for Chicago. The ride from here to Sacramento was uneventful, except that the weather was hot and dusty, and the sleeping-car porter exceptionally eloquent with his brush broom. The train made slow time, stopping often and long. It seemed as if that train stopped twice as often as it started. It was also a dangerous train to travel on—very dangerous. The danger was that most of the passengers might die of old age before reaching Sacramento. However, we did at last reach the State capital, and spent several hours there riding over the place and visiting the chief objects of interest. Sacramento is a beautiful little city, located in the heart of a remarkably rich agricultural region. But, alas! it lacks one essential element of growth and prosperity—it has no Illinois Association! [Laughter.]

A ride of two nights and one day brought us to Salt Lake City, where we stopped over for one day to see the sights and investigate the mysteries of Mormonism. On arriving at the depot I was grieved to learn from a hackdriver that Brigham Young—was dead. [Laughter.] I had long desired to see that distinguished champion of the Mormon faith, the man who had the courage to encounter so much matrimony, while the average American husband is often made to tremble in the presence of only one wife. But Brigham was dead. Paradoxical as it may seem, though he lived to be an old man, he died Young. [Laughter.] However, I had the pleasure of visiting his grave, which, after all, perhaps, afforded me more genuine, solid, all-wool satisfaction than could have been derived from a personal interview. Though Brigham Young himself is dead, there are numerous fractions of his widows still scattered about the city, all well and with good appetites. [Laughter and applause.] The more prominent features of Salt Lake City are the cooperative store, which is a perfect bee-hive of commerce; the great temple, which has been in course of erection for thirty-five years and is not yet completed; the assembly building, one of the finest specimens of modern architecture extant; the great tabernacle, with its turtle-back roof and seating capacity for 12,000 people; the hot sulphur springs, where each Mormon apostle goes every year to take his annual bath; Camp Douglas, a beautiful military encampment on the hills; and last, though not least, the penitentiary, where, from time to time, such Mormons as become too utterly good and pure for this world are deposited for safe-keeping. [Applause.] Salt Lake City is a beautiful place, and the surrounding valley is now a garden of fertility. A few years ago it was a dreary desert. The great change thus wrought shows what can be accomplished by a few determined people, cooperating for a common purpose, with unbounded faith in their leader and devotion to their alleged principles. The city has a population of 25,000, of whom only about 2000 are anti-Mormon. Hence, it is reasonable to infer that society there is somewhat tinctured with Mormonism.

The journey over the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad from Salt Lake to Denver, a distance of 735 miles, probably affords the traveler a view of more grand, sublime scenery than a trip on any other railroad in the world. It is an experience never to be forgotten. I will not now attempt to describe it in detail, but only allude to the three most conspicuous features of the route. The famous Black Cañon presents to the eye of the traveler every conceivable variety of rocky peak and mountain gorge. Then there is the equally famous Marshall Pass, where the little train, drawn by two engines, winds around devious ways, and for several hours continues to climb up, up, up, until it has reached the dizzy height of 10,850 feet above sea level, and we seem to ride among the clouds. It is wonderful that human enterprise could ever build and operate a railroad through such a country. And, finally, the Royal Gorge, that frightful gash in the mountains where frowning walls of rock more than a thousand feet high overhang the narrow, crooked chasm through which the railroad train and the Arkansas River, side by side, go dashing, crashing, thundering down the steep decline as if in a mad race to see which shall first reach destruction. To the tourist occupying an observation car, with unobstructed vision, the ride through that awful cañon is so fraught with excitement, novelty and danger as to make its impress indelible on the tablets of memory. No man or woman's life can be complete without a trip over that most wonderful of all railroads.

Arriving at Denver in the evening we decided to remain one day. I first saw Denver when it had but one railroad and only 8000 inhabitants. It is now a splendid city, with nearly 80,000 population, and all the features of growth and greatness, except an Illinois association. In twenty-four hours more we had reached and left Kansas City, which is a splendid place to get away from as soon as possible. The ride from that point to Chicago was over the Chicago, Alton and St. Louis road, the best railroad that ever touched the Missouri River.

It seemed odd, and yet natural, to see and smell Chicago once more. The city is still growing rapidly, growing bigger, noisier and dirtier. Its splendid buildings and vast business interests stamp it as the great metropolis of all the West and Northwest. But its climate is simply execrable. I talked California among the people as best I could, and found a growing tendency to flee from those regions of heat and cold and come to Southern California. Let us do our best to aid them when they come hither in at least finding temporary comforts until they can establish homes of their own.

And now, ladies and gentlemen, a few further observations and I will proceed to cease. In journeying over this vast land I am always profoundly impressed with two prominent ideas or facts. The magnitude of our country and the superiority of our form of government. Unquestionably ours is the greatest and grandest country on earth. It has more than 4,000,000 square miles of territory, reaching from ocean to ocean, with harbors on either side sufficiently capacious to float the commerce of a busy world. It has every conceivable variety of soil and climate, with agricultural and mineral resources inexhaustible and unsurpassed. It has towering mountains, majestic forests, fertile valleys, far-reaching prairies, magnificent lakes and flowing rivers. It has uncounted miles of railroads, growing towns and splendid cities, with marts of trade whose pulsations vibrate around the world. And yet, fellow-citizens, these things all fade into insignificance when compared with those great fundamental principles on which our government was founded, and by virtue of which the American people have made this Nation what it is. [Applause.] The principles embodied in the brief but expressive declaration that this is "a government of the people, for the people and by the people." Such principles are of more intrinsic value than all the coin and commerce of every nation. [Great applause.] And it is for the honest, enlightened, justice-loving citizens of the country to determine whether or not the principle of popular government shall be preserved unimpaired. Whether the constitution and laws shall be upheld by the popular will or ground to pieces by the Moloch of Monopoly on the one side and the red dragon of Anarchy on the other. [Immense applause.] Every citizen should realize that he is a component part of the great body politic, and he cannot escape responsibility. Let us hope that at least a majority of the people will so act, so use the elective franchise, and so exert their influence, politically and socially, that this great Republic, the fairest political fabric beneath the skies, shall stand as a beacon for other nations through coming ages, and demonstrate to the world the matchless grandeur of American institutions. [Loud and prolonged applause].

BROKE THROUGH.

A Curious Accident at Santa Monica Friday.

A correspondent writes that a surprising accident happened in Sycamore Cañon, Santa Monica, Friday. J. J. Carrills and his brother Alfred, accompanied by J. Geiselman of St. Paul, Minn., and W. A. Edwards of Minneapolis were out on a hunting expedition, and as they drove along looking for game they suddenly found the horses pitching headforemost into a cavity caused by the giving way of the surface of the ground. The occupants of the vehicle barely escaped by leaping to one side, but the horses and wagon were all jammed in a confused mass into the opening, twenty feet under ground. By the assistance of a lot of Chinamen who were working near by the animals and vehicle were finally extricated with but little damage. A brief examination disclosed the fact that the party had driven over a tunnel which was being excavated in the cañon by the Sunset Company, which is developing water. There was but a thin space between the surface of the ground and the top of the tunnel where the horses fell through.

Fitch, was reëlected by acclamation, with the following associates: Senior vice-president, Jennie Whitson; junior vice-president, Pauline Barrett; treasurer, Catharine Scholl; chaplain, Hattie Alexander; conductor, Mabel Marshall; guard, Agnes Saline.

"TRAITOR COHN."

The Fourth Ward Macchiavelli Democratically Denounced.

B. Cohn, who steered the city into several costly financial holes while he was in Council before, and who now wants to get back again to steer the $700,000 treasury, cannot possibly appeal to any Republican to vote for him. And as to the Democrats, they are not likely to forget his treachery to his own party. The Herald, Democratic organ of the city, hasn't always loved him—as witness the following:

A lengthy editorial in the issue of December 1, 1882, headed "Fraud," says, among other things:

"By dint of one man making noise enough for ten, and one delegate and casual spectators voting early and often, the farce of a convention was gone through with, the result being that B. Cohn, who, after having been ignominiously whipped as Democratic candidate for Mayor some years ago, and who afterward was elected by the Republicans a member of the City Council, was nominated for Mayor.

"The Herald has heretofore said that Mr. Cohn was a Republican. If we are mistaken, it is simply because he is a political Proteus—the changing chameleon of our local affairs. He has proved himself to be everything by turns and nothing long. He is a sort of Jump Jim Crow. Perhaps it would be better to say that he is a practical professor of political thimblerig, of whom it may with truth be declared that now you see him and now you don't. He has caused himself to be named, with the chimerical hope that he can beat Thom and elect Mansfield, out of revenge at the good sense shown by the late Democratic City Convention in ignoring his preposterous claims for the mayoralty."

The issue of December 3, 1882, has over a column of editorials abusing Cohn, for which the following extracts speak for all:

". . . . This fine exemplar of the Judas Iscariot of the political variety was an aspirant for the Democratic nomination for Mayor. To the utmost of his small ward tactics he was laying the wires. . . . He was an avowed candidate; and, when he found that his claims to a station which requires a certain amount of social eligibility were not thought to be overshadowing, he procured the calling of a little Republican side-show to nominate him for Mayor. Only an ingrained and inexcusable treachery could explain this action of Mr. B. Cohn's. A Democratic sorehead—a man who could not gracefully submit to the preferment of another and a better man, he instantly converted himself into a Republican stool-pigeon."

"Today Mr. B. Cohn is a melancholy example of a man who has taken a contract to betray his party, and who finds himself unable to deliver the goods. After tomorrow his sorehead treachery will stick to him like a very shirt of Nessus."

"The work of repudiating this local manipulator and handler of false political dies should be made memorable in its complete ness."

"The fact it, that outside of a very small faction, Cohn will get no votes. Mr. B. Cohn, late effusive Democrat, now the local Benedict Arnold. The Cohn racket is headed by a false man, who, after failing to receive the nomination of his party, has started in to betray it."

On the morning of December 5, 1882 (the day after the election) the Herald exults editorially over the crushing defeat of Cohn:

"Probably no journal ever more accurately forecast the result of the election than the Herald did that of yesterday. It told the people that Mr. B. Cohn, when he insolently assumed to be able to betray the Democratic party to Gen. Mansfield and his associates on the Republican ticket, would not be able to deliver the goods. The great bolter and bloriater has been reduced to his proper level, and his power for evil is forever ended. We exult in this great retribution."

ON INDIAN LAND.

Interesting Suit Brought by Ejected Settlers.

Rather an interesting case was filed with the Clerk of the United States Circuit Court yesterday. It is brought by John G. North and R. Gird against W. Preston, an Indian agent at the San Bernardino Indian agency. The plaintiffs claim that they settled on a tract of land which was thrown open by the Government for settlers. They had been on the land but a short time when Preston forcibly ejected them from the land, and they sue for possession of their homesteads. On the other hand the Indian agent claims that the land is a part of the reservation, and that the plaintiffs have no right to it. The suit was transferred from the San Bernardino Superior Court, and will be tried as soon as it can be set.

Liberal Souls.

A handsome pocketbook stuffed full of gold and silver pieces, was found on a street bench near the Crocker residence yesterday afternoon by Little Robbie Heffner, aged 5 years. The child ran to his home near by, 148 South Olive street, and gave the purse to his mother, who at once sent him back to watch for the losers. Soon two richly-dressed women appeared, one of whom was hunting for her pocketbook. On being allowed to prove and receive back her property, the owner, with many effusive thanks, searched among the pile of coins, finally handing out a nickel with the remark: "That is the smallest thing I have."

A Special-Car Party.

The Santa Fé special car No. 99 arrived yesterday from the East with the following party: Hon. E. B. Purcell and family, Maj. N. A. Adams and wife, Stuart J. Hogg, Manhattan, Kan.; A. P. Maginnis, Neosho Falls; Howell Jones, W. H. Simpson, Topeka; Hon. S. S. Benedict, Fredonia. Mr. Purcell is one of the directors of the Santa Fé company. Mr. Simpson is from the office of Traffic Manager White at Topeka. The party starts for San Bernardino today on a tour of the California Southern Railroad and California Central railway lines, and will return the last of the week.

Fonck's Freedom.

The hard case of John L. Fonck—"Honest John"—who is now in jail for thirty days for contempt of court, and who will have to give $500 bonds when he gets out, has already been noted. He has now applied for a writ of habeas corpus, claiming that his alleged offense did not come within Judge O'Melveny's jurisdiction.

A BIRTHDAY LUNCH.

Capt. Powell Remembered by His Railroad Friends.

Capt. David Powell is one of the oldest and best-known railroad men on the coast. He is popular among the boys, and has warm friends on every line in the United States. Yesterday the Captain was 60 years old, and his many Los Angeles friends gave him a surprise at the New United States Hotel in the shape of a nice little afternoon lunch. Invitations were sent out to Col. E. E. Hewitt, division superintendent, Southern Pacific Railroad; C. F. Smurr, assistant general passenger and ticket agent, Southern Pacific Railroad; A. J. Hechtman, agent, Union Pacific Railroad; John Clark, traveling agent, Union Pacific Railroad; F. W. Thompson, traveling agent, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific; M. Welch, agent, Missouri Pacific; Dr. J. H. Woodburn of Indianapolis; Thomas E. Willis of Arcadia Hotel; John U. Henry of the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad; John Powell and George Schmidt of the D. Powell & Co. excursion agency. The party sat down to lunch at 2:20 o'clock p.m., and did not rise until after 4 o'clock. Following is the menu:

Consomme Col'ert.
Lake Tahoe Trout à la Joinville.
Julienne Potatoes.
Tenderloin or Beef à la Marischale.

GOING AHEAD.

The Tenth-Street Hotel Still Marching On.

Yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock the projectors of the big Tenth-street hotel met in the office of Hammel & Denker, on Requena street, and went to work on their by-laws and constitution. They examined the plans, and decided to get to work as soon as the money subscribed can be collected in. The plans were examined by the board of directors, and they all seemed to be well pleased with Mr. Denker's work while back East. He had the architect talk with almost all of the eastern hotel men, and the plans are made up from their combined ideas. The hotel will accommodate over 1100 people, and will have 680 rooms. Every room will contain a fireplace, and it will be so arranged that while a guest is registering the clerk can spring a button and the fire will be under full blast before the guest has signed his name. The building will be thoroughly lighted by immense skylights, so that gas will not have to be used at all during the day, as is the case in nearly all of the large hotels of the world. Mr. Denker expects to furnish the hotel in a style that will throw every public house on the coast in the shade.

MRS. MORGAN.

Further Developments in a Sad Case of Insanity.

Mrs. Morgan, the lady who was locked up in the County Jail the other day on a charge of insanity, was again brought in from Pasadena yesterday. When she was first arrested she told a most pitiful story about how her husband was anxious to get rid of her, and had left her for some other woman whom he was about to take East. He was sent for and said he was perfectly willing to take her home with him, and the authorities allowed him to take her back to Pasadena. Yesterday she got on the warpath and visited the homes of several good people of Pasadena, and frightened them so that they sent for Constable Mundell. The officer had a good deal of trouble to get her under control, as she fought like a wildcat, but he finally got her into his carriage and did not let up until he reached the County Jail in this city. It took several men to get her out of the carriage, but after she was put in a cell she quieted down and seemed to be perfectly sane. She will be examined tomorrow by a commission of lunacy.

A Big Vault.

Two car loads of the materials for the great steel vault of the Los Angeles Safe Deposit and Trust Company have arrived, and the rest is expected to be in by Monday, when the work of putting it together will begin. This is said to be the finest vault in Southern California, and the finest, with one exception, on the Pacific Coast. As the parts were all fitted at the works in the East, the putting of it together can be done in two or three weeks, so that the company will be ready to begin business by January 1st.

East San Gabriel.

The San Gabriel Valley Land and Water Company, No. 20 South Spring street, has resumed sales of their lots and lands at East San Gabriel. A large number of investors have been attracted there the past week, and quite a large amount of property has already been sold. No finer or more healthful location can be found. Only twenty minutes' ride from Los Angeles via the Southern Pacific Railroad. Go and see its many advantages, and the attractive prices at which you can purchase now.

A Cold Wave.

It will be remembered that last year the Board of Trade bestirred itself to secure from the Weather Bureau telegraphic forewarning of storms during the fruit-packing season. The effort was successful, and these advance telegrams are now received whenever there is occasion. The following were received yesterday:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 3.

Observer, Los Angeles: Cold wave for Colorado, Kansas and Nebraska Sunday and Monday. GREELY.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 3.

Observer, Los Angeles: Cold wave now advancing southeast from Montana will reach Lake Michigan, Illinois and Northern Texas Sunday morning, with lower temperature on Monday morning. GREELY.

Suing on Promissory Notes.

I. Levy brought suit yesterday against James A. Montgomery of Norwalk for $500, alleged to be due on a promissory note dated June 1st.

A similar suit was entered by A. J. Coons against Anderson Ross for the same amount.

A GAME in which the players are bound to lose—Burlingame.

ILLEGAL voting, no matter who it helps or hurts, should be sternly suppressed next Monday.

IT is said that B. Cohn boasts that he will get into the Council if it costs him $10,000. No man can afford to pay that sum for the place and be honest after he gets it.

THE voters of the Third Ward have it in their power to secure the return of two good men to the Council—Bonsall and Humphreys. In order to make sure of it, don't scatter.

"ENERGY and temperate habits" are good things, but they are weak without honesty. The able gentlemen who have been holding up trains in Arizona were extremely energetic, and they never touched liquor.

THE Third Ward can be depended on to do the honorable thing, unless two or three hundred shovelers are colonized there. It is for the legal voters to say whether they shall be oversloughed by the illegal voters.

A PARAGRAPH in yesterday's TIMES relative to Mr. Bosbyshell, one of the Democratic nominees in the Third Ward, made us say that he "votes as a Prohibitionist." It was intended to say that he rates as a Prohibitionist—a combination, by the way, not often seen in a Democratic candidate.

THE Tribune madman, Boyce, that "person of bad temper," is wrong in his foolish allegations concerning the sending of political dispatches from the office of THE TIMES to the Chronicle or any other San Francisco paper. No such dispatches as he describes have been sent from this office—and none such published in the Chronicle.

The New President of France.

Marie Francois Sadi-Carnot was yesterday elected President of France.

Sadi-Carnot is a grand nephew of Carnot, Napoleon's War Minister, known to French enthusiasts as "the organizer of victory;" and his grandfather, Lazare Hippolye Carnot, was Minister of Public Instruction after the revolution of 1848.

After the reelection of Grévy in 1885, at the close of the legislative session of that year, M. Brisson and his colleagues handed in their resignations; a new cabinet was formed January 7, 1886, with Charles Louis de Saulees Freycinct as Premier, Gen. Boulanger as War Minister and Sadi-Carnot as Minister of Public Instruction, the same position filled by his grandfather in 1848.

In the party nomenclature of France, Sadi-Carnot is described as an "Opportunist." The Opportunist is a conservative Republican, opposed to Royalists and Radicals.

The election of Carnot was evidently a compromise. The Radicals were unwilling to face the chances of Ferry's election, and the Royalists feared to encounter the prospect of revolution.

Sadi-Carnot is a native of the central part of France; a man somewhere in the neighborhood of 60 years of age, and while his election inspires no enthusiasm, it inspires no fear. The peace of France would seem to be assured for the time being.

New Volume.

Today begins the seventh year and thirteenth volume of the LOS ANGELES TIMES. Its growth has been steady and healthful, its career notable and successful. In the short period of six years it has reached a commanding position among the journals of California, and today occupies a vantage ground, morally, financially and politically, of greater strength and solidity than ever before. With pride and satisfaction in its past, hope and confidence in its future, THE TIMES proceeds on its chosen way, proud of the honor and grateful for the confidence again and again unmistakably shown in it by the people, who compose its great constituency.

JOHN MCILMOIL, one of the Republican nominees for the Council in the Fourth Ward, is highly indorsed by his neighbors for his good qualities and business experience. He has, at different times in his life, been farmer, stock-raiser, miner, miller and builder, and has, we are informed by one of his neighbors, been successful in all these pursuits. He formerly lived in Santa Rosa, where he was at one time Street Commissioner. He is a self-made man, who crossed the plains in early life, and has won his way by his own exertions. He has lived in Los Angeles about seven years, where he has been a builder. He is recognized in the community as "a square man," of integrity and good business ability. He deserves to be elected to the Council, where he will be a useful member.

JOHN F. HUMPHREYS is a man whom any good citizen can conscientiously vote for.

Of the two Democratic nominees in the Third Ward, Bosbyshell and Humphreys, the latter has had the longer residence here and the larger experience in municipal affairs. He, like Capt. Bonsall, is acquainted with the legislative needs of a growing city, and would do intelligent, honest and effective service in the Council. They should both be elected.

C. P. THURSTON, Democrat, recently resigned from the Board of Education on the plea that he didn't have time to attend to those duties. Now he is running for Council, the work of which will take him four times as long, unless he neglects it. Newell Mathews and F. G. Randle, Republicans, are the men to elect in this Ward (the First). They may be depended upon to attend to the official duties that will devolve upon them.

IT was reported late last night that Capt. Frankenfield, in the Fifth, who at one time had thought of pulling out of the canvass, has finally concluded to stand. This is a gratifying announcement. Frankenfield is good timber, can be elected, and makes an A1 Councilman. With himself and Sinsabaugh in the Council, the Fifth Ward will be well represented and the city's interests well cared for.

A NUMBER of French citizens of Los Angeles, whose opinions have been elicited regarding the new French President, M. Sadi-Carnot, express no particular enthusiasm over the choice, but regard it as a safe and conservative one. The prevailing idea is that the election of Carnot means peace.

WE have heretofore given sketches of the Republican nominees for municipal offices. They are on the whole an exceptionally good lot, and the electors are safe in putting up their ballots on them, and turning our friends the enemy out to grass.

THE indications now are that Capt. Bonsall and John F. Humphreys will lead in the Third Ward next Monday. They will make capable Councilmen, and are worthy the support of the intelligent electors, citizens and business men of that ward.

HARRY DAM has written two letters on the subject of pardon peddling. He says it isn't so. Dam certainly couldn't expect people to believe that he was damphool enough to say it was so.

What Detective Rogers of San Francisco Knows About Him.

Strong Evidence of Bold Attempts to Sell Pardons.

Capture of an Alleged Omaha Murderer in San Francisco—Warden Shirley Steps Down—McComb Takes Charge of San Quentin — Other Coast News.

By Telegraph to The Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 3. — [Special.] The denials of the charges of pardon-brokerage made against Harry Dam, ex-Gov. Stoneman's late secretary, which have appeared in the San Francisco papers recently, have aroused at least two parties to definite action. James. R. Rogers, who has been connected with the detective force of this city for the past eighteen years, is willing to support the statement already published regarding the pardon of Henry Bolte, for which it appears Dam asked, but did not receive, $250 from Rogers and Mr. Plageman, of the firm of Siebe Bros. & Plageman of this city. Rogers and Plageman had endeavored to procure a pardon for Bolte from Gov. Stoneman, but the latter peremptorily refused to sign the pardon under any circumstances. Rogers, however, received a dispatch from Dam on the night of the very day on which the Governor refused to interfere, saying that Bolte would be released on the day after. True to the word, Bolte left Folsom Prison on the 31st of December, 1886, by virtue of a pardon signed by Gov. Stoneman.

Demands were subsequently made by Dam for the $250, he eventually coming to San Francisco in person; but to his urgent requests the forgetting detective, Rogers, paid no attention. Dam finally applied to Plageman, who in turn kept referring him to Rogers, and Dam at last gave up in disgust. Detective Rogers has now in his possession documentary evidence of the allegations made, which he is ready to produce at the proper time. W.

PURSUED BY THE LAW.

An Alleged Murderer from Omaha to Be Taken East.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 3.—[By the Associated Press.] Local detectives have arrested Herman Mittman, alias Henry Hunt, in this city and delivered him to an officer from Nebraska, where he is wanted for the murder of a man named Dunlap about a year ago. Mittman was the proprietor of the Millard Hotel. He engaged in an altercation with Bill Cole, foreman of a gang of railroad laborers, and the latter drew a knife. Walter Dunlap, a well-known citizen and prominent member of the Knights of Labor, endeavored to act as peacemaker, but, unfortunately, received the shot meant for Cole from Mittman's revolver. On examination the latter's daughter testified to the fact that Cole was advancing on her father with a drawn knife. Mittman was held in $10,000 bail to answer before District Court at Omaha. Meantime his hotel was closed, and, becoming despondent, he determined to leave the place. He went as far as St. Louis, returned to Kansas City, and, eventually, came to San Francisco, arriving here the 4th of July. From here he drifted to Yaquina, Or., but there finding no success caused him to return. His arrest by Detective Lawson followed. He agreed to go east without awaiting requisition papers, but thought best to await the arrival of the Sheriff of Omaha, who is expected tonight or tomorrow.

THE PRISON DIRECTORS.

Shirley Makes Way for McComb—New Warden for Folsom.

McComb was made warden of San Quentin and Charles A. Ull warden of Folsom. J. E. Ellis was elected clerk at San Quentin and W. W. Cunningham clerk at Folsom.

SAN JOSE, Dec. 3.—The Santa Clara County Horticultural Society today decided to hold the annual citrus fair on February 22d, to continue two weeks. All counties in Northern and Central California will be asked to make displays, and the American Horticultural Society will be invited to attend in a body. An effort will also be made to secure cheap excursions from Riverside.

WASHINGTON.

Republicans and Democrats in Caucus.

Carlisle Nominated for Another Term as Speaker.

Two Democratic War Horses Indulge in Fisticuffs.

The Interstate Commission Orders a Reduction of Railway Rates and Decides That Colored Men Have Some Rights on Trains—Revenue Reform.

By Telegraph to The Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—[By the Associated Press.] The Republican members of the House of Representatives held their first caucus of the session this afternoon. Of the Republican representation of 153 members, 117 were in attendance. None of the four Independent members elect were present. Cannon of Illinois and McComas of Maryland were respectively reelected chairman and secretary of the caucus. McKinley of Ohio nominated Thomas B. Reed of Maine for Speaker. The nomination was confirmed by acclamation. Reed made a brief speech, in which he counseled the party to harmony, and predicted a Republican victory in the next Presidential election.

Nominations for the remaining officers of the next House were then made as follows: Edmund McPherson of Pennsylvania, by Representative Boyne, for clerk; Daniel Shepherd of Illinois, by Adams, for sergeant-at-arms; W. T. Fitch of Ohio, by Butterworth, for doorkeeper; Charles H. Greer of Dakota, by Nelson, for postmaster; Francis W. Thomas of Indiana, by Browne, for chaplain. The nominations were agreed to. Mr. Thomas, nominated for chaplain, is a minister of the Society of Friends, and is well known in the West as a Quaker preacher.

Only incidental mention was made of the tariff, and no attempt was made to outline a policy.

A DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS.

The committee appointed by the Democratic caucus to consider the question of the credentials of Senators Turpie of Indiana and Faulkner of West Virginia and other Democratic Senators reported today that all were fully entitled to their seats, and so far as the Democrats could influence matters should be seated. The committee also reported that it had examined all the credentials of the Republican Senators elect, and found several upon which objections could be legitimately based. The caucus, however, decided that, the defects being merely technical, no objection should be made unless Republican objection to the admission of Democrats was made. It was known that the latter had the advantage; in fact, that Senator Jones of Nevada is absent and paired with Senator Hearst, who begins the new term and is therefore not yet a Senator.

Upon the request of the Republicans the caucus at once assented, as proposed by Senator Kenna, who has charge of the Democratic pairs, to the pairing of Senator Jones with some Democrat already sworn in. This reduces the voting strength of each party to 24. Senators Beck and Kenna were elected respectively chairman and secretary of the Democratic caucus, to serve during the coming session.

CARLISLE FOR SPEAKER.

Much interest was manifested in the caucus of Democratic Representatives tonight. Representative Cox of New York called it to order and spoke at considerable length. He congratulated the members on a Democratic victory this year which so paralyzed the opposition that they would not be able to recover for 1888 unless the Democracy fail in harmony and duty.

On motion of Representative Breckenridge of Kentucky, Hon. J. G. Carlisle was nominated for Speaker by acclamation.

Carlisle was brought in, and, after acknowledging the honor conferred in naming him for the position a second time, and referred to the duties which the position involved at length, the importance of the coming session and necessity for harmonious action of the Democratic majority, without which success would be doubtful.

John B. Clark was nominated for clerk of the House, and J. P. Leedom of Ohio for sergeant-at-arms. Then came the only contest of the evening, that for doorkeeper. Mr. Donelson was nominated by Representative Washington of Tennessee, W. R. Reines or New York by Burke Cochrane, Abe Hurt of Mississippi by Berry, D. K. Reeder of Pennsylvania by Ermentrout, and Mr. House of Michigan by Tarsney. As soon as the nominations were closed, Breckenridge of Arkansas made a vigorous attack on Donelson in line with his published charges. Laulbee of Kentucky and Blount of Georgia defended the doorkeeper. Blount was repeatedly interrupted by Breckenridge, and finally both gentlemen lost their tempers.

FISTICUFFS.

In the course of the warm colloquy which followed Mr. Blount misunderstood a remark by Breckenridge and struck his antagonist, who returned the blow, striking Blount in the face. The gentlemen were then separated and the circumstances explained to Blount, who apologized to Mr. Breckenridge, and the gentlemen shook hands with great cordiality.

On the first ballot Donelson received 72 votes, Hurt 53, Reeder 4, House 5, and Reines 22.

On the second ballot the New York delegation, which opposed Donelson, changed their votes to Hurt, and the others followed. The vote stood: Hurt 88, Donelson 66, Reeder 1. This elected Hurt. Lycurgus Dalton was nominated postmaster, and W. H. Milburn chaplain of the House.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

How the State Department Regards the Cutting Claim.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—[By the Associated Press.] Officials at the Department of State are at loss to account for the feeling that has sprung up in Mexico regarding the Cutting case. It is said that the subject has been presented to the Mexican Government in accordance with the forms of international law with a view to a settlement of the extra-territorial jurisdiction question, and not with any intent of endeavoring to force vexatious claims in an arbitrary manner. As a matter of fact there has been no new presentation of the Cutting claim against the Mexican Government. No fixed money indemnity has been demanded, and nothing said in the judgment of the department that would warrant the creation of ill feeling between the two countries.

AN INTERSTATE RULING.

The Interstate Commerce Commission today decided in the case of Milton Evans and William Reed against the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company that a rate of 30 cents on wheat from Walla Walla to Portland was too high. On and after December 15, 1887, the company must not charge more than 23½ cents between those points.

The Interstate Commerce Commission today decided the case of W. H. Council (colored) vs. the Western and Atlantic Railway. Council was forced to ride in the "jim-crow" car, run for colored people in the South, although he had a first-class ticket. The opinion, which is by Commissioner Morrisson, holds that colored people may be assigned separate cars on equal terms without advantage to either race, and with increased comfort to both. The "jim-crow" car furnished only second-class comforts. The road must furnish colored people, who buy first-class tickets, with accommodations equally safe and comfortable with other first-class passengers.

REVENUE REFORM.

Democrats and Republicans at Sea on the Subject.

TOLEDO (O.), Dec. 3.—[By the Associated Press.] This evening's Blade published letters from eighty members of Congress in reply to queries about revenue reform. Nearly all the answers admit the necessity of revenue reduction by from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000, but there is a great diversity as to how it is to be effected.

The Democratic revenue reformers strongly urge a reduction of tariff on all articles that can be called necessaries of life, and generally favor a reduction of internal revenue taxes except on tobacco. The Republicans and Randall Democrats as a rule insist upon a retention of tariff except upon sugar. They advocate the abolition of nearly all internal revenue taxation, the most common exception being whisky. The more pronounced protectionists advocate the entire repeal of the sugar duty and the payment of bounties to sugar growers. There is a general expression among Republicans and some western democrats in favor of enlarged expenditures for coast defenses, the new navy, river and harbor improvements. The postal telegraph also has many supporters.

He Easily Captures the Prize on the Second Ballot.

General Satisfaction in Paris and Berlin Over the Result.

Other Foreign News—The Claim Presented in Cutting's Case Helping the Opposition to Diaz of Mexico—The German Crown Prince's Condition.

By Telegraph to The Times.

VERSAILLES, Dec. 3.—[By Cable and Associated Press.] The congress of Senators and Deputies to elect a successor to President Grévy was opened at 2 o'clock by Leroyer, President of the Senate, who declared that the National Assembly was duly constituted to elect a President. Deputy Michelin, Irreconcilable, asked leave to make a motion, but the President refused, declaring that the assembly was an electoral college.

Paul de Cassagnac observed that the assembly was sovereign.

M. Gautier contested the competency of the President to limit the assembly's rights.

President Leroyer replied: "I take my stand on the constitution."

M. Michelin proposed to revise the constitution.

The President again declined to allow M. Michelin's proposal to be made, and the latter entered a protest. The matter then dropped and balloting for the election of President began.

At 4:15 the ballot closed and the count began.

On motion of President Leroyer the congress adjourned until 4:45.

The result of the first ballot taken was: Sadi-Carnot, 303; Ferry, 212; Gen. Saussier, 148; De Freycinet, 76; Gen. Appert, 72; Brisson, 86; other candidates, 26.

SADI-CARNOT ELECTED.

De Freycinet and Ferry then withdrew in favor of Carnot, thereby assuring his election. He received 616 votes. The announcement of his election was received with cries of "Vive la Republique."

The ballot upon which Sadi-Carnot was elected stood as follows:

Sadi-Carnot, 616; Gen. Saussier, 186; Ferry, 11; De Freycinet, 5; Gen. Appert, 5.

Sadi-Carnot, chosen President of France today, is a grand nephew of Gen. Carnot, Napoleon's great War Minister, and grand son of Lazare Hippolyte Carnot, Minister of Public Instruction after the revolution of 1848. Sadi-Carnot was Finance Minister during part of Grévy's Presidency and Deputy for the Department of Calais.

HOW IT CAME ABOUT.

PARIS, Dec. 3.—Before the second ballot was taken the members of the Left Group held a meeting. Ferry announced his resolution to withdraw in favor of Sadi-Carnot, De Freycinet tendered a similar notification. An order of the day was thereupon adopted, declaring that the party recorded this patriotic action of withdrawal, and, at Ferry's instance, resolved to vote for Sadi-Carnot. Leroyer, on receiving the final ballot returns, said:

"M. Sadi-Carnot, having obtained the suffrages, I proclaim him President of the Republic."

An outburst of cheering followed, especially from the Left and Center. Leroyer then declared the session closed.

Acknowledging the congratulations, Sadi-Carnot said:

"My greatest wish is that this great day may remain present in the minds and hearts of all. It signifies that the representatives of France can be united, that their common efforts can and must be for the constitution, assuring an active and stable working government capable of bestowing upon the nation liberty at home and dignity abroad, with all benefits which our country expects from the republic."

Sadi-Carnot drove direct to the Elysee, taking formal possession of the palace. He then retired to his own residence.

THE NEWS AT BERLIN.

BERLIN, Dec. 3.—Official and diplomatic circles were absorbed today in the developments in Paris, but public interest was not at all strained. An unceasing stream of telegrams poured into the Foreign Office, and the details of the voting at Versailles were sent without delay to Freidrichsruhe. The election of Sadi-Carnot is better received in official circles than would have been that of De Freycinet or Ferry. The new President is considered to be a feeble man—one who will be unwilling to consent to complications which might bring about a European war. It is believed that he will be unable to make an alliance against Germany. His personal preferences are for a neutral pacific policy, and he will try to govern through a ministry with the same tendencies.

Telegrams received here from the German Embassy at Paris record the gratifying fact that, though it was considered necessary to guard the approaches to the Embassy, everything was peaceful during the excitement. The utter absence of any anti-German demonstrations, and the fact that the efforts of Deroulde and others to provoke a patriotic ebulition found no response, are raising hopes of a prolonged assuagement of the revanche sentiment.

GENERAL SATISFACTION.

PARIS, Dec. 3.—An immense crowd assembled this evening at St. Lazare's station to await the arrival of the Senators and Deputies. Great animation was shown upon the boulevards, but there was no disorder. It was apparent that the result of the election gives general satisfaction.

FERRY'S BACKER.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—A Daily News special from Paris claims that Ferry was the Suez-Panama candidate for the Presidency. Ferry, it said, had promised the great financiers that if elected he would endeavor to help the Panama Canal Company out of its present financial difficulties by getting France either to guarantee a loan to the Panama Canal or to float a grand lottery. Vast sums of money are said to have been spent securing votes for him with a view to further patronage.

NOTES ON THE SITUATION.

PARIS, Dec. 3.—The papers condemn the message sent by President Grevy to the Chambers yesterday with his resignation.

M. Floquet has withdrawn his resignation as President of the Chamber of Deputies.

Military reinforcements are arriving in the city. M. Grevy, after his removal from Elysee, took up his residence in avenue Diana.

The Republique Francaise says the attempt to ostracise M. Ferry was really aimed at the Opportunist party, who, however, will not allow themselves to be excluded from sharing the affairs of the Republic.

THE SISTER REPUBLIC.

The Cutting Claim—Tactics of Diaz's Political Opponents.

CITY OF MEXICO, Dec. 3.—[By the Associated Press.] No apprehension is felt in Government circles of difficulties with the United States over the Cutting case. The United States in a friendly way demand that Mexico abandon the doctrine of extra territorial jurisdiction as against the principles of international law, and ask an indemnity in the Cutting case without specifying the particular sum. The matter will go through the usual diplomatic channels without any rupture.

The opponents of Diaz, who is a candidate for reelection, declare that Diaz is overfriendly with the United States Government, and favors selling Lower California to the United States. Government Inspector Messick states that there is no truth in the report. Lower California being free from taxation, does not favor annexation. The clericals oppose Diaz because Diaz is friendly with the United States, and favors the introduction of American ideas.

THE FRUIT CROP.

Commissioner Chapman's Report to the State Board of Horticulture — Nature Furnishing the Remedy for Pests.

By Telegraph to The Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 3.—[By the Associated Press.] A. Scott Chapman of San Francisco, Commissioner of Agriculture, submitted his annual report to the State Board of Horticulture today. He states that the past fruit season has been very prosperous for Southern California, but owing to the rise in real estate many fine orchards have been abandoned and replaced with beautiful homes. The black scale has ceased to be a pest owing to the parasitic fly which has kept it in subjection. The red scale is very bad, but Prof. Coquillet has found a parasite feeding on it, and growers may yet look to nature for relief. The white scale has been steadily increasing, notwithstanding efforts to keep it in subjection. One internal parasite has been found feeding on it, which will be watched with interest.

The apple crop this year was very heavy. The nut crop and English walnut crop have both yielded and sold well, though the price has since receded from 9 to 7 cents on buyers' hands. There is a great future for California lemons. This fruit keeps well, sells well and is ripening every month in the year. The crop matures in December and January, but the fruit is kept till June, when the market is better.

In Los Angeles the orange crop is behind, owing to the ravages of the red and white scales. In San Bernardino and San Diego counties the crop is above the average. In San Diego the cause is a virgin soil and isolation from insects. In Riverside the cause is the free use of fertilizers, and quarantine against insect pests. The olive is more prominently before the people north and south. It enjoys exemption from the white scale. The olive should not be trained as a tree, but as a bush with extending limbs, so that the fruit may be gathered by the hand without bruising. This recommendation is made from observations of this practice in Europe. In fig culture the white Adriatic takes precedence, the fruit not falling off the tree but drying thereon.

Kineon, directors of the Fidelity Bank, testified that the board did not authorize an issue of certificates of deposit to the Chemical National Bank of New York, nor the payment of drafts to Chicago grain brokers.

The most breezy witness thus far heard was Albert P. Gahn, who testified that he was secretary of the Swift Iron and Steel Company and secretary and treasurer of the Riverside Iron and Steel Company; that the last named company had no assets when organized and had never acquired any, yet it procured a call loan from the Fidelity National Bank of $100,000 on its own notes indorsed by E. L. Harper.

The court adjourned till Monday.

Testing Dynamite Shells.

Graydon was made at Sandy Hook yesterday, and of five steel shells the first penetrated the fifteen-inch turret of a large target and exploded, demolishing the target; four of them fired were wereto determine therange and demonstrated by Graydon's method that a dynamite shell could be propelled by ordinary black powder from service guns so as to obtain satisfactory penetration and destructive power. The ordnance board was much pleased with the result.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED.

This has been demonstrated in thousands of cases treated by

DR. WILLIAMS.

With his new system of Medicated Inhalations combined with proper constitutional remedies for the liver, stomach, blood, etc.

Probably no system of practice ever adopted has been so universally successful as that introduced by Dr. Williams for the cure of Catarrh, Throat Diseases, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.

Inhalations are applicable in all diseases of the respiratory organs, but must be prepared for each individual case as they severally require.

Persons desiring treatment by this system of practice can use the remedies at home as well as at our office, and which will cause no inconvenience or hindrance to business whatever.

I have seen so many of these cases cured that I do not consider any case hopeless unless both lungs are seriously involved. Even then the inhalations aid us in dissolving the mucus and in contracting and healing the cavities, which nothing else can do with the same success.

The very best references from those already cured.

CONSULTATION FREE.

Those who desire to consult with me in regard to their cases had better call at the office for consultation and examination, but if impossible to do so can write for a copy of my Medical Treatise, containing a list of questions. Address,

TAN GAMES CLOSED.

AN EASY MATTER WHEN THE OFFICERS WISH.

How Twenty Chinese Gambling Dens Have Been Running in Full Blast, Undisturbed by the Police—Constable Aguirre Closes Them.

Last night there was not a single game of fan-tan running in Chinatown. This feat has not been brought about by the police department, although that body has pretended to make several thousand efforts to stop gambling in that sin-ridden portion of the city. To make the whole matter clear to the reader, it will be necessary to give a brief history of the crookedness that has run riot in Chinatown, with Chinese highbinders and gamblers on one side, and some corrupt members of the police department on the other side. In the first place, the Chinese are the greatest gamblers in the world. They will take more desperate chances in that business than any other class of people; and, rather than give up this little amusement, they will spend thousands of dollars in building strong-holds; and if they can't keep the officers out by bars and bolts, then they will buy up the police even if it costs them twice as much as is used in gambling. There are twenty gambling dens in Chinatown, and they are so securely guarded that it would be almost impossible for anyone to get in without the free use of sledge hammers or battering rams. Not only that, but they make up a pot of money for the police every month. Each game, according to its wealth, puts up from $30 to $50 a week. The fund will average $100 a game per month, and a corrupt police administration can gather in from $1500 to $2000 monthly on the Chinese games. This thing has been going on in Los Angeles for a long time, and one Chinaman who acts as agent for all the games has been the go-between. He makes his bargains with the owners of games and gets all the money he can out of them. He then goes to some officer and jews the price down, and all he can save is his own. This fellow has succeeded in stealing a large fortune since he took charge of the business for the gamblers. Whenever a new administration comes in this slick little heathen may be seen hovering around, and if he is not able to "fix" things several games will be pulled. But the little business man for the gambler partners has to settle things up in some way, and pretty soon a raid takes place, but only once in a great while. The excuse for not gathering them in more frequently is that it is too hard to break into the gambling forts, and the people think it is all right. Now, there has not been a raid in Chinatown for a long time, and up to last night every game was running in full blast. One week ago last night Constable Martin Aguirre said to his deputies, Johnston and Clements: "The police say gambling in Chinatown cannot be stopped. I know that it can, and inside of ten days there will not be a game running or we will have every Chinese gambler in the city in the County Jail." The three went to work, and yesterday morning they had things so arranged that they could trap the gamblers to a man. They soon convinced the main men of Chinatown that the games would have to close down. John made a big kick, but he saw that he did not have corruption to deal with, and the order to close down every game in town went forth.

This simply shows that the gamblers cannot run when the officers want very hard to close down on them.

ACCIDENTAL DROWNING.

An Old Fisherman Goes Under at San Pedro.

Night before last Coroner Meredith held an inquest at San Pedro on the remains of an old fisherman who was known as "George, the Fisherman." He was identified as George Herbert, and was 60 years of age. He has lived in San Pedro during the past five or six years. On Thursday evening he was seen wandering about the wharves in an intoxicated state, and it is supposed that he fell into the water and was in such a condition that he could not swim out. The jury found that he came to his death from accidental drowning. It is not known whether he was a married man or not.

FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

Buildings Must Be Put Up More Substantially Henceforth.

The Fire Commissioners met yesterday and thoroughly discussed the fire ordinance. They made up their minds that builders will have to put up more substantial buildings in the future. All fronts will have to be of iron, stone or brick, and the walls must be not less than eight inches in thickness. They will probably frame a new ordinance to be submitted to the Council one week from tomorrow. A large number of bills were audited, and the board adjourned until next Saturday.

The Green Sea of the Coral Island.

Prof. W. K. Brooks, who accompanied the scientific expedition sent to the Bahamas by the Johns Hopkins University, writes as follows in a letter to a Baltimore newspaper: Our pilot steered us safely through the crooked inlet between Whale Key and No-Name Key into the inner sound. Here we saw for the first time that intensely green sea which has been so frequently mentioned by voyagers among the coral islands. The vivid color soon became more familiar, but never lost its novelty, and it still holds its place as the most brilliant and characteristic feature of this highly colored landscape. The water is so perfectly pure and clear that small objects, like shells and starfish, are visible on the pure white coral sand at a depth of fifty or sixty feet, and the sunlight which is reflected from the white bottom gives to the water a vivid green luster which is totally unlike anything in our familiar conception of water. The whole surface of the sound seemed to be illumined by an intense green phosphorescent light, and it looked more like the surface of a gigantic polished crystal of beryl than water. The sky was perfectly clear and cloudless, and overhead it was a deep blue color, but near the horizon the blue was so completely eclipsed by the vivid green of the water that the complementary color was brought out and the blue was changed to a lurid pink as intense as that of a November sunset. The white foam which drifted by the vessel on the green water appeared as red as carmine, and I afterward found in a voyage through the sounds in a white schooner that the sides of the vessel seemed to have a thin coat of rose-colored paint when seen over the rail against the brilliant green.

THE MUSE IN MANACLES.

By an Envious Bard, After Reading "Ballades and Rondeaus."

Bored by the Ballade, vexed by Villanelle,
Of Rondeau tired, and Triolet as well!

THE BALLADE.
(In Bad Weather.)

O! I'm in a terrible plight—
For how can I rhyme in the rain!
'Tis pouring from morn till night.
So bad is the weather again.
My language is almost profane?
Though shod with the useful galosh,
I'm racked with rheumatical pain—
I think that a Ballade is bosh!

I know I am looking a fright:
That knowledge, I know, is in vain;
My "brolly" is not water-tight,
But hopelessly rended in twain.
And spoilt by the rude hurricane!
Though clad in a stout mackintosh,
My temper I scarce can restrain—
I think that a Ballade is bosh!

O, I'm an unfortunate wight!
The damp is affecting my brain;
My woes I would gladly recite,
In phrases emphatic and plain,
Your sympathy could I obtain.
I don't think my verses will wash,
They're somewhat effete and inane—
I think that a Ballade is bosh!

ENVOY.

I fancy I'm getting insane,
I'm over my ankles in slosh:
But let me repeat the refrain—
I think that a Ballade is bosh!

THE VILLANELLE.
(With Vexation.)

I do not like the Villanelle,
I think it something of a bore—
This tinkle of a Muffin-bell!

The reason why I cannot tell:
Each day I fancy, more and more,
I do not like the Villanelle!

It makes me stamp and storm and yell,
It makes me wildly rage and roar;
This tinkle of a Muffin-bell!

I look upon it as a sell,
Its use I constantly deplore;
I do not like the Villanelle!

Poetic thoughts it must dispel,
It very often tries me sore;
This tinkle of a Muffin-bell!

For this I know, and know full well—
Let me repeat it o'er and o'er—
I do not like the Villanelle,
This tinkle of a Muffin-bell!

THE TRIOLET.
(In a Temper.)

A Triolet's scarcely the thing—
Unless you would carol in fetters!
If lark-like you freely would sing,
A Triolet's scarcely the thing;
I miss the poetical ring,
I'm told that it has, by my betters!
A Triolet's scarcely the thing—
Unless you would carol in fetters!

THE RONDEAU.
(In a Rage.)

Pray tell me why we can't agree
To bid the merry Muse run free?
Pray tell me why we should incline
To see her in a Rondeau pine,
Or sigh in shackled minstrelsy?
Why can't she sing with lark-like glee,
And revel in bright jeux d'esprit!
Where form can't fetter or confine—
Pray tell me why?

Pray tell me why that frisky gee,
Called Pegasus, should harnessed be?
Why bit and bridle should combine
To all his liveliness consign—
To deck the Rondeau's narrow line—
Pray tell me why?

Lines.

[Written for a young friend, July 25, 1886.]

"This above all, to thine own self be true;
Thou canst not then be false to any man."

The Bard of Avon wrote these words, and you,
My friends, can scarcely find a better plan
Of life, whose morning has but now begun
To brighten into day. For truth and love
Are still the only goal that must be won,
If you would ever taste the bliss you strove
To win. Remember when you have to stop
To justify an action to your mind
You may be sure 'tis wrong, so let it drop
The moment conscience calls a halt. Tho' blind,
Unconscious you be of the hidden snare
And can but dimly feel there's something wrong,
Still there's an instinct keen that says, "beware,"
And bars our downward course with warnings strong.

Respect your parents, give your father such
A manly love and prompt obedience, he
Will look with pride upon you; and to touch
The hearts of your companions, be as free
To yield and sacrifice your own desire
To please their taste. But to your mother, see
That all your tend'rest love should never tire
To pay her for her tireless love of thee,
And when that pure warm breast, where nestling first
You slept in peace, is cold in death, and nigh
Her grave you stand, how sweet in that grief burst,
To say no act of mine e'er made her sigh.

TARA.

Illogical.

She stood beside me while I gave an order for a bonnet;
She shuddered when I said, "And put a bright bird's wing upon it.

A member of the Audubon Society was she,
And cutting were her comments made on worldly folks like me.

She spoke about the helpless birds we wickedly were harming;
She quoted the statistics, and they really were alarming.

She said God meant his little birds to sing in trees and skies,
And there was pathos in her voice, and tears were in her eyes.

"Oh, surely in this beauteous world you can find lovely things
Enough to trim your hats," she said, "without the dear birds' wings."

* * *

I sat beside her that same day in her own home at dinner,
(Angelic being that she was to entertain a sinner!)

Her well appointed table groaned beneath the ample spread,
Course followed appetizing course, and hunger almost fled.

But still my charming hostess cried, "Do have a reedbird, dear,
For they are so delicate and sweet at this time of the year."

The Weather Poets.

RESPECTFULLY DEDICATED TO THAT TRIBE.

I dreamed the muse with startled look
Read page where modern rhymes are kept,
Then scornfully threw away the book
And quite bewildered, wondering, wept.

And thus methought I heard her say:
"O poets, pitiful, I wonder whether
There are no themes for nobler lay
Than these dull rhymes about the weather?"

NINA'S LETTER.

Spies's Proxy Wife Goes for the Illinois Judges.

The following extracts are from a letter published by Nina Van Zandt:

"My dear Mr. Lazarus: Since the receipt of yours of the 19th instant, a new crisis has been reached. The blow has fallen. Seven honorable judges have unanimously condemned to death seven innocent human lives, have widowed seven women and orphaned no less than nineteen little children. Not alone this—they have invented a new case of their own. I simply cite one out of many examples.

"A stenographic report of A. R. Parsons's speech at the Haymarket was introduced in the Gary comedy as evidence in favor of Parsons. This is what he said, in substance: 'No, do not try to hang McCormick or any other capitalist. A hundred would only spring up in his place. Aim at the system not at an individual.'

"This was in answer to a suggestion from the crowd that McCormick's life should pay for the six workmen whom he had ordered shot down in cold blood the day before. You see it proves that poor Parsons hadn't an idea of stirring up the crowd to do any overt act. And so Gary and Grinnell admitted. But, lo, the judges of the Supreme Court have gotten ahead of Gary and Grinnell. They say: "A. R. Parsons said at the Haymarket: 'Do not murder McC., or any other one man, but murder en masse.' See, Mr. Lazarus? Were the matter not so terribly solemn, I should laugh every time I think of that opinion of those judges.

"All your suggestions have not 'glanced off.' Several have been acted upon. For instance, my mother wrote to the Rev. Dwight L. Moody, telling him the truth—rather, a fraction of it—concerning this prospective assassination. She has had, of course, no answer yet.

"You think that I should start out on a lecturing tour, and I am, of course, perfectly willing. But all the friends here say that I must keep quiet; must not give the press a chance to print new lies, to put inflammatory language into my mouth. This it would do, no difference what I said. For the sake of the man who is of all living creatures the dearest and best to me, I am holding my tongue.

"Thanking you for all your kind efforts in our behalf, I am, ever yours sincerely,

"NINA SPIES."

A NEW ROMANCE COMES TO LIGHT.

"P. S.—By the way, I must tell you of a remarkable incident. The millionaire clothing dealer, Henry W. King (his magnificent mansion occupies a diagonal corner from our home), had two employés on the celebrated 'gentleman jury,' one or both of whom were known to have openly thirsted for the blood of August et al. before being impaneled. King knows this, but will not permit other employés to testify to it. Furthermore, he has openly advocated the execution.

"Now, he has a daughter Bessie, who is engaged to be married to young Charles Bentley, son of the rich Bentley (banker or Board of Trade man), of the South Division of Chicago. Well, the marriage has been mysteriously postponed, and now it leaks out that Bentley has bitterly upbraided old King with aiding and abetting legal murder, and consequently King won't let his daughter marry him. The young lady vows that she'll marry the young man whether her father cuts her off without a shilling or not. Doesn't this show how certain influential men of this town have schemed? Here is a fashionable, wealthy conventional young man, who cannot bear the idea of silently countenancing such an atrocity, and voluntarily abandons the old King's millions—unprecedented stake."

No. 336 HERON STREET, CHICAGO, Sept. 17, 1887.

Yucca Palms.

Nothing for miles and miles I saw but Yucca palms,
The desert's candelabra, lifting grotesque arms—
These and the alkali-steeped earth for aye the same,
As if defying power of man to e'er reclaim—
Till, longing to view nature in some softer guise,
And weary of this monotone, I closed my eyes.

Yet e'en for Yucca palms has science found a use,
And some fine alchemy doth here and there transfuse
A hopeless soil till it one verdant pasture grows,
And all that erst was waste doth blossom as the rose.
Exists there not in this some lesson for our need—
Some lesson thoughtful eyes will not be slow to read?

[Condensed from Courier, Dec. 2.]

Twenty-five eastern people arrived in this city yesterday.

The gas company has nearly completed its main along Third street from I street to the depot.

That San Diego is rapidly becoming one of the most prominent ports on the Pacific Ocean is shown by a glance at the vessels now in the bay. They number at present thirty-seven, divided as follows: Eleven ships, sixteen schooners, nine barks and one barketine. Twelve are from foreign ports. The total carrying capacity of the vessels is nearly 20,000 tons, or 45,000,000 pounds.

The railroad shops here are now employing about 400 men.

Squatters are becoming numerous along the bay front.

Many improvements are under headway at present and many more contemplated. National City is on the boom, with a big B.

The wharf is crowded with business, it being necessary to work men night and day shifts, and still they are unable to keep up with the work.

OUR NEIGHBORS.

Clearwater.

CLEARWATER, Dec. 1.—[Correspondence of THE TIMES.] Our artesian lake is forming. An artificial island is being constructed from which, at no distant day, music will resound over our town, as a music pond upon the island is in contemplation. The lake, when completed, will cover fifteen to twenty acres, will have a level shore around it, and a rustic bridge is to be built to the island. Varieties of aquatic plants will here find a quiet home. The willow, palm, pepper and other trees will in time bend their waving branches over our lovely lake, proving a delightful shade as the visitor shall row over its placid waters. The fifty men employed in making the wayward course of the New River into its natural channel will have their work completed this week and thereby reclaim from 500 to 600 acres of choice land to the California Cooperative Colony. The country, ever beautiful with its carpet of living green, has since the rain put on added freshness. PROGRESS.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

"Protestant's" Sham Defense of Catholics.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 2.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.] It is evident that your would-be "Protestant" correspondent has, wilfully or otherwise, arrived at a "grossly absurd" interpretation of my very plain and comprehensive inquiry, in reference to the censurable indifference of "Catholics, as such, collectively" toward questions or issues of national or even Catholic importance in this country. Any child of reason understands, when any party or denomination is alluded to, that such allusion does not merely and exclusively include their principles in the abstract, nor their leaders solely; but to all their adherents "collectively," who are the living, responsible embodiment of said principle, in which case the great majority, and not a few exceptional persons, have to be proven either in favor or against an issue before the whole body can be held responsible. Would-be "Protestant" finds it much easier to dodge my whole question and assertion, and charge, in an altogether new and uncalled-for issue, namely, the teachings of the Catholic Church and the eloquent appeals of a few of her reverend clergy, all of which make the shameful indifference of the great majority of Catholics more censurable. Of what avail are the greatest moral truths and eminent instructors, if those truths and instructions, like the seed mentioned in the gospel, fall on barren soil. Would-be "Protestant" makes a decidedly false statement when he asserts that a full proportion of the Catholic laity are zealous, active workers in the cause of temperance, much less prohibition, which, by the way, he again dodges, and substitutes temperance in his gigantic effort to make a very, very few exceptions answer for millions of Catholics who make it necessary for the Pope to frequently call upon, to awake, to arise, to engage in politics as active, model citizens, zealous for the public good. When would-be "Protestant" feels disposed to politically champion Catholics "as such collectively," in their unenviable position as being the most flatulent, most inane, portion of the body politic of this glorious republic, or as reliable workers in the cause of church or state, then we will be only too willing to meet him with or without gloves.

VERITAS.

She Likes "Guadaloupa."

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 2.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.] I won't positively assert that nothing in your interesting paper has ever struck so sympathetic a spot, with me, as "Guadaloupa's" letter in today's TIMES has done; but I will assert that just at the moment I can't recall anything to which I more vigorously cry Amen! and Amen! Being a spinster, and a very radical one, I have a good deal of time to ponder about this humanity, that Horace Walpole calls comical when we only lightly think of it, and tragical when we deeply feel for it; and one of my most earnest conclusions is that the time will yet come when women will seek and ask for their life partners, just as men only do now. The reason for much of the unhappiness of the married is, as "Guadaloupa" says, largely because of the uncleanly and man-permitted habits of men; but also it is the result of women being obliged to sit by and await the offer of any man who proposes. It may not be a compliment to women that so many of them take up with indifferent offers; but, God help us! we all have dreams of home and children! and the per centage is very small of women who have an assured support. But, Mr. Editor, what I want briefly to say is, that if women ever have opportunities to make offers of marriage, unless Los Angeles is born again, I do not believe that there are 100 men in it who will ever fulfill their dream of home and children.

ST. KATHERINE.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

Dr. Baker of Keokuk, Iowa, will spen the winter in California.

The New England Southern Conference of the Methodist Church will be held in Providence on April 4th.

Rev. Dr. Chauncey Hobart's new book, "The History of Methodism in Minnesota," is out, and is well spoken of by those who have seen it.

Trinity Church, Saco, Me., has voted to extend a pastoral call to Rev. Robert B. Parker, pastor of the Episcopal Church, Ipswich, Mass.

The journal of the English New Mexican Mission gives an account of that interesting and progressive work. Rev. S. W. Thornton is superintendent.

Rev. Gustavus Tuckerman of Christ Church, Plymouth, has resigned to go to New York to assist Rev. Dr. Houghton, the rector of the "Little Church Around the Corner."

Rev. M. C. Harris of San Francisco received November 14th, a cablegram from Japan, which reads, "Revival;" signed Fukuinkai, the Japanese word for gospel society.

Rev. C. A. Brooks of Evanston, Wyo., furnished a stirring essay for the District Conference of Northern District Colorado Conference. It is entitled "Ban, not Protection, to the Liquor Traffic."

Rev. Mr. Spurgeon, referring to his secession from the Baptist Union, says that when he entered the conflict he made up his mind that even if he were left alone he would be none the less decided as to the propriety of his course.

Mrs. Col. Springer of the Woman's Home Missionary Society gave a very interesting address at Bush-street Church, San Francisco, last Sunday evening. She received twenty-one names, each pledging themselves to pay a dollar to carry on this great work.

Rev. H. C. Heyser of the East New York German Evangelical Church has resigned, owing to the fact, as he alleges, that some of the members of the church are Anarchists and Socialists. The persons he refers to are proprietors of large beer gardens and saloon keepers.

Dr. Allen, missionary of the M. E. Church South to China, and Dr. A. Stevens arrived in San Francisco last week. The latter has circumnavigated the globe, but his plan of travel is not yet finished; it includes Alaska and Australia. Dr. Stevens is looking remarkably well. He goes down to Los Angeles and will visit San Gabriel, where his daughter, Mrs. Halstead, lives.

Woman's Pleasant Ways.

[Philadelphia Record.]

There were two society women, says a Boston paper, who loved each other with that rancor only known in the first circles, and they had just met after a separation extending over the summer months. During that time Mrs. A. had unfortunately freckled badly, while in Mrs. B.'s once-raven tresses shone many a gray hair.

"Do you know, dear," Mrs. A. said, regarding her companion's head fixedly, "they do say that powdering for the hair is coming in again, and, the moment I heard of it, I thought how nice it would be for you."

Mrs. B. did not flinch. She merely lifted her glance with a sweet serenity and regarded her companion steadily.

"Yes," she responds, "all those old-fashioned tricks do help out amazingly. How sorry you must be, Annie, that the old style of patches for the face are not revived so you could cover those dreadful freckles."

And then they smiled sweetly at each other and began to talk about their lapdogs.

Sterling exchange, dull and steady at 4.81¼ for 60-day bills; 4.84½ for demand.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—There was a generally bullish feeling in stocks this morning, though an unfavorable bank statement caused a momentary reaction. Manhattan was an especially weak spot, owing to a new issue of bonds. St. Paul and Missouri Pacific were notably strong in early trading. Kansas and Texas made large advances on small business. In most of the list fluctuations were confined to the narrowest limits. Almost everything is higher tonight. Kansas and Texas is up 1¼, and Manhattan is 1⅝ lower.

Government bonds were dull and steady.

MINNEAPOLIS!

This New Townsite!

Beautifully located on line of Southern Pacific four miles north of Los Angeles,

NOW ON THE MARKET!

The Prices of Lots Range from $350 to $450.

TERMS OF SALE — One-third cash, one-third in six months, one-third in one year.

This winter will be a repetition of last. Outside property will advance rapidly, and those who buy now at bedrock prices will not only reap the benefit of all improvements that go to enhance values, but will get full advantage of owners' advances which will occur from time to time during the winter.

We start this new town off with the following advantages:

☞ It is only four miles from the city.

☞ The Southern Pacific Railroad runs through the tract, and depot and side tracks will be built at once.

☞ The Los Angeles and Glendale Motor Railroad, now about completed, runs within 600 feet of this townsite.

☞ The Pasadena Boulevard, now an assured fact, is laid out immediately through the center of the tract.

☞ The San Fernando County Road runs along the north line.

There is no finer valley in Southern California. Abundance of water, good mountain air. Parties desiring cheap suburban homes, with rapid and frequent communication with the city, cannot do better than to buy here. Thousands of people will be here this fall seeking homes, and will overflow to outside points for lack of accommodations. Remember how outside property advanced last winter and profit by the experience. Buy early.

At Church—A Little Comedy—Feminine Rhymes—Autumn Song—The Old Story—The Blessed Pie of the Season—Wasted Sweetness.

She's the dearest little lady,
And her eyes are deep and shady
As she kneels,
And her look of pure emotion
Shows how true is the devotion
That she feels.

She is plump, and oh, so pretty!
With her no one in the city
Can compare.
Of her charms, I might make mention,
Her sweet eyes are like the gentian,
Blue and rare.

She has hair of richest tinting,
Softest brown, with gold gleams glinting,
Here and there.
On her cheek a hue reposes
Like the hearts of blushing roses,
Yet more fair.

I could read a page of Latin
Sooner than describe the satin
Of her gown.
Of its shade there's no divining.
So I watch its silken shining
Looking down.

O she's such a dainty treasure!
I could never, never measure
All her charms.
So I sit and lose the preaching,
Only thinking now of reaching
Her soft arms.

On the sermon's speedy ending,
All the hopes are now depending
Of my life.
My excuse, if you'll believe me—
Full confession will relieve me—
She's my wife.

A Little Comedy.

Is the world the same, do you think, my dear,
As when we walked by the sea together,
And the white caps danced and the cliffs rose sheer,
And we were glad in the autumn weather?

You played at loving that day, my dear—
How well you told me that tender story—
And I made answer, with smile and tear,
While the sky was flushed with sunset's glory.

Now I shut my eyes, and I see, my dear,
That far-off path by the surging ocean—
I shut my eyes, and seem to hear
Your voice surmounting the tide's commotion.

It was but a comedy slight, my dear—
Why should its memory come to vex me?
Can it be that I am longing that you should appear
And play it again? My thoughts perplex me.

'Tis the sea and the shore that I miss, my dear—
The sea, and the shore, and the sunset's glory—
Or would these be nothing without you near
To murmur again that fond old story?

I know you now but too well, my dear—
With your heart as light as a wind-blown feather—
Yet somehow the world seems cold and drear
Without your acting this autumn weather.

—[Louise Chandler Moulton in November Century.

Feminine Rhymes.

And all afresh each morning,
Her braided locks adorning,
My prudent counsel scorning,
The precious time she's pawning.

But ever through her dreaming,
She has been deftly scheming,
How, in this idle seeming,
The hours she'd be redeeming.

For thus she says and sigheth:
"Ah, me, who these locks spieth,
He straightway hither hieth
And yields him here or dieth."

S. PHILLIPS GALE.

Autumn Song.

Red leaf, gold leaf,
Flutter down the wind;
Life is brief, O life is brief,
But Mother Earth is kind;
From her dear bosom he shall spring
new blossoming.

Red leaf, gold leaf,
They have had their day,
Love is long, if life be brief—
Love is but a day;
And love from grief and death shall spring
To new blossoming.

—[Boston Transcript.

The Old Story.

Now the gay unmarried farmer in the evening takes his charmer,
Mary Jane or Sal or Dinah, for some pleasant moonlight drives;
And he tells her that yearning story, always new though always hoary,
And before the winter's over she'll have joined the ranks of wives.

Floating Fun.

Some people appear to be surprised because Cleopatra was a little woman. It doesn't require a giant to make a fool of a man.

People have been known to talk against gambling all their lives, on every possible occasion, and then, after all, to go and get married.

Young Mr. Sissy (to his pretty cousin): In your matrimonial fishing, Maude, if you should make a catch like me, what would you do? Maude: Throw it back in, Charley.

A woman's hand! How beautifully molded! How faultless in symmetry! How soft and yielding! and O, how much of gentle memory its pressure conveys! Yet we don't like it in our hair.

Wife: I see that a museum has on exhibition a woman with two mouths. She is a curiosity. Husband: Two mouths! I wouldn't mind paying ten cents to see a woman with no mouth, but two—never!

"George, dear," she said reproachfully, as she clung fondly around his neck, "why will you eat raw onions when you know you are coming to see me?" "Merely to test your love, my precious," replied George.

He (making a long call): What a very odd clock, Miss Smith. Is it an heirloom? She (suppressing a yawn): O, no; it is a recent purchase of papa's. He has a penchant for such things. I was about to call your attention to it.

"How is your son getting along in New York, Mr. Hayseed?" "I guess he ain't doin' as well as he says he is. He was home t'other day, an' had on a colored shirt an' a white collar. I rayther suspect he's behind with his washer-woman."

First sweet girl: "I understand that handsome stranger has been calling on you quite regularly." Second sweet girl: "Yes; he's awfully tiresome." "Tiresome?" "Yes; he don't do a thing the whole evening but sit on the extreme end of the sofa and talk."

Cella: Why do you encourage attentions from both Tom and Harry? Irene: Well, dear, I like Tom best, but he is not very well off and can't afford a coupé if we go to the theater. I call him "my fine-weather beau." Cella: Then what do you call Harry? Irene: My rain-bow.

Bobby (to his big sister): I heard Mr. Featherly talking about the biscuits you made for tea last night, Clara. Big sister (with assumed indifference): Yes? and did Mr. Featherly think they were very nice, Bobby? Bobby: No; he said they gave him indigestion.

"Where are you going this evening, Charley?" said one young man to another. "Going to call on Miss Clara." "But you went to see Miss Annie this summer." "Yes. You see Annie doesn't like ice-cream and Clara doesn't like oysters, and so I go to see Annie in the summer and Clara in the winter."

Young Noodles, the dude: "Weally, Miss Clarissa, I love you dearly." Clarissa: "Let your future conduct prove that you do then." "Will you be my wife?" "Really, Mr. Noodles, if you had any love for me you wouldn't want me to throw myself away like that!" He saved the expense of a ring that time.

A conjugal conversation overheard in a street car: "What are you going to give me the 15th, dearest? You know that is my birthday." "It is a date I never forget, darling. I shall give you $100." "O, how lovely! I'm going to buy that exquisite wrap." "Excuse me, love, I give you the $100 to pay the rent." Sulks.

Mrs. Hendricks (to caller): No, I didn't read the story, Mrs. Hobson. My husband read it and told me that it ended dreadfully, and I don't like that style of novel. Mrs. Hobson (surprised): Why, it ended beautifully, and they were married in the last chapter. Mrs. Hendricks (with a set look on her face): I'll speak to Mr. Hendricks about it again.

FIRST VIEWS OF SUNLAND.

How a Tenderfoot Takes to Southern California.

[Contributed to THE TIMES.]

My first impressions on arriving in Los Angeles, via the Southern Railway, were the size and shape of my No. 8 boots, in mud that was plastic, and accommodated itself to the size and shape of said boots with perfect ease. But, passing over this disagreeable introduction, in a few hours the sun came out, and I found myself transported, as it were, from the rigid, and sometimes frigid, Northwest into a balmy and most agreeable air that borders close upon the tropical. The change to me was most agreeable, although I found a few croakers abusing the country like a pettifogging lawyer. It seems so very strange to be out without winter wraps on, and to see fruits hanging on the trees, flowers in bloom, the broad spreading branches of the palms, doors and windows open, fruits displayed in the market, no ice, no snow, all glistening with the cheerfulness of May in the northern climes, and it all has a charm about it to the "tenderfoot" that borders on the exquisite.

I find those who are grumbling are they who come expecting too much in the way of gain. They came without money or dexterity, and do not realize what they expected, although good wages.

But Los Angeles, notwithstanding all croakers, is a wonderful city. It is peculiar to itself; there is nothing like it on the face of the globe. Wichita, Kan., had its day, and has now a world-wide reputation as a boomer, but it is insignificant compared to that of Los Angeles. And why? Because the boom of Wichita was largely artificial, or the artifice of ingenious real-estate men who knew how to work upon the fancy and draw men to Wichita, which place is no better in any way than hundreds of other places in Kansas. But not so with Los Angeles. It is the metropolis of the great fruit-raising districts of Southern California, that is destined to be densely populated and ever more and more popular as a winter resort.

People are attracted to Southern California, not by the pen-pictures of writers, but by its fine climate and resources, that evidently are developed.

The material improvements of Los Angeles impress one with the fact that the people have faith in its future, and inspire confidence in the visitor. Your city has great possibilities before it, and is destined to be second to none on the coast in the near future, as it will become more and more a winter resort when visitors return and relate its advantages. It "beats all," even now, at the number of people in the Northern States that are trying to sell out to come to California, and we cannot blame them.

A Glorious Autumn Night.

Ah 'twas a glorious autumn night
Full fifteen years ago—
The moon and stars were shining bright
And bathed the hills in mystic light—
When robed in garbs of snowy white,
My Ethel met me in the hall
Responsive to my pleading call.

Now what did I or what did she
The world shall never know;
But 'twas an hour of ecstacy—
Of all the world most happy mei,
Not even the moon or stars could see—
We pledged our loves and lives and all
When Ethel met me in the hall.

Ah, well, we met again last night
('Twas rather late I know)
Somehow I didn't feel just right
(I may have been a little tight);
When clad in nightly robes of white
My Ethel met me in the hall
And braced me up against the wall.

And what did I or what did she,
I'm not prepared to show;
It may suffice to state that we
Had quite a jubilee—
And I may add (twixt you and me)
It is with pain that I recall
When Ethel met me in the hall

EUGENE FIELD.

He Comes, He Wilts.

He came in from Sacramento to see new and booming Southern California. He was suffering from jaundice, dyspepsia, enlarged liver and had the spleen. He wore a number six boot on his left foot and a number twelve on the right, a slouch hat and a seedy coat. One eye stood out and the other in, and he had a cold and uncharitable affection for California's better half. He approached a tenderfoot, and unbosomed his knowledge of the orange groves and fruits of the north, and tried to prove by a northern hypothesis that you can't raise blue beans and sour apples in the fertile valleys of the south. He was taken charge of by an itinerate real-estate preacher, who showed him around, and sold him a block of land, and he went home a wiser and happier man.

CHAPTER XV.

They reached the cabin, and, fastening their horses under a rough shed, Lilian opened the door, without ceremony, and entered the house. The room into which they stepped was lighted by two windows, but they were dirty and grimed with smoke, covered with great patches of cobweb, where the spiders must have toiled for months, undisturbed save by the dust that had settled on their cunning webs, till some of them hung down heavy with its weight, and swung to and fro, flapping against the dirty rags that were stuffed into the openings which had been left by broken panes.

The light was dim enough in the room, creeping, as it did, through so many obstructions, and Lilian, at her first glance, did not perceive its occupants, but at last she saw them crouched in its further corner: one man, with a savage-looking face, covered with a heavy, bushy beard, his hair tangled and matted, evidently long uncombed, and beside him another not less evil-looking, with smooth face, and eyes cruel and glittering as steel. Near them, with hands clasping her knees, and swaying her tall, gaunt form back and forth, sat a miserable-looking hag, with yellow, shriveled face, toothless jaws, thin gray hair, and long, shining, bony fingers.

Lilian approached them saying: "I beg pardon for this intrusion, but the storm has driven me to you for shelter. It is fearful, isn't it?"

The old woman nodded her head, gave a short grunt, and pointing to an old broken chair, motioned Lilian to sit down, which she did, while Loo clung to her with a keen sense of childish terror, both at the storm and the ugly, weird countenance of the old crone, who sat eyeing them with a fixed, intense scrutiny that awoke in Lilian, with all her natural fearlessness, a strong feeling of dread.

Had it been possible, she felt that it would have been better to have braved the tempest than to have trusted herself here. She did not like the look on the old hag's face, the sudden light glittering in her eyes as she caught sight of the costly chain attached to the gold watch that she wore, nor the quick, rapid glance, so full of meaning, which passed between her and the two men, who watched her more stealthily, yet scarcely less intently.

The storm continued unabated in its fury. Sticks, small pieces of timber and the rent branches of trees were hurled in masses against the windows, while the rain fell in deluging torrents.

"This cannot last," thought Lilian. "It will be over so that we can be off before sunset. A night in this place!" She put the thought back as an ugly thing that she would not face, as an useless terror that would not come near enough to harm.

But still the rain fell and the trees tossed their long branches in the arms of the furious tempest, which rent them like reeds, and sent them hither and thither through the darkened air.

The night crept on. The hurricane had spent its wrath, but still the clouds poured down their watery deluge, and now and then the lightning flashes were answered by the sullen roar of the distant thunder. Lilian's heart misgave her, but she tried to reason away her fears as groundless, and with an effort shook off at least all outward appearance of distrust and suspicion.

"Yer'll hav' ter stay with us tergal," said the old crone at s darkness settled about them. "Arter ez well take yer duds off an' hav' thet thar tother ... kennel yere fur door and went in ... only an old broken ... loose, just ready ... drop from their places, and no means of fastening it to secure herself from the intrusion of anyone without. The room had but one window, dimmed and smoked and cobweb-lined, like those of the adjoining apartment, and in one corner stood a rough frame, on which was a miserable strawbed, covered by a worn, dirty, patchwork quilt, and a bundle of old clothes rolled up served for a pillow. One or two rickety chairs and one old, worm-eaten chest completed the furniture of the room.

Lilian went to the window and brushed aside with her dainty fingers the dust-laden webs, shook off from her hand two or three large black spiders that had been aroused by her intrusive sweep into their domain, and then looked out into the darkness. Everything without was still but the storm. The house stood at some distance off from the road, in a lonely spot, a mile or more away from any other habitation. Not an object was moving without, and near her only those rough and brutal faces. No wonder that the brave girl recoiled from a sense of danger, or that from her heart went up an earnest suplication to Him who never slumbers or sleeps, that He would protect them till the morning.

"O, Missis Lilian," whispered Loo, "I do wish we hab nebber cum yere. I'se 'fraid, dey looks so berry wicked. Dat ar ole 'oman, she hab de cloben foot sumwhar, I knows. Can't we run away?"

"Not while it storms so. We should lose our way, it is so dark. But don't be afraid; keep quiet and you shall stay close by me, and I think Mr. Maynard will come for us by and by."

In a short time the old woman came to the door and looked in. "Grub's ready. Come on!"

Lilian hesitated a moment, feeling no appetite for food, and especially such food as she would be likely to receive here. But she felt the importance of treating them with a show of confidence, and evincing an appreciation of any advance toward a show of hospitality that they might make, so she went out. There was an entire absence of anything like table linen, the dishes being placed upon the bare boards of the rude table. Cold potatoes, some warm corn bread, and a bowl of sour milk—that was all. Not a dainty dish, surely.

"Help yerself," said the crone, and Lilian took a small potato and a bit of bread, which she forced herself to eat.

The cat-like eyes of the rough, husky-whiskered man were upon her.

"Whar d'ye live, gal?" he said, at length.

"My home is some fifteen miles or so from here, but I am stopping at Mr. Maynard's now, which is only a pleasant ride's distance."

"Whar's yer dad?"

"He is with me there," replied Lilian, looking him full in the face.

"Umph! likely," said the man. "Them's traitors thar," he continued, "the 'ole nest of 'em, of the wust kind uv 'em as what tries ter make the nigger ekal with us white folks. But they'll fin' yer South ekal fur enny plug muss they kin scar' up, ennyhow. They won't make ennything by ther darned sneakin' roun' ter git away southern rights," and he brought his huge, hard fist down upon the table with a blow that made it totter, and the angry fire in his eyes was anything but assuring to Lilian.

Supper over, Lilian asked for a light. "I don't feel like retiring quite yet, while it storms so, and a light would be cheerful," she said.

The woman, evidently with some reluctance, brought her part of a tallow candle, which she lighted and gave into her hand with the single ejaculation, "Thar!" and Lilian went back to her dismal room. Her first movement was to place the candle where its gleams would reach out into the darkness, with the hope that should any of her friends come out in search of her, as the storm abated, they would be attracted by its light, without which they might miss entirely of finding the cabin. She then sat down on the old chest, with Loo by her side, and leaning her head against the thin board partition, began her weary waiting.

Wolfskill Orchard Tract!
At Private Sale,
In large subdivision, fronting San Pedro, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Alameda streets; also Wolfskill, Ceres, Gladys, Ruth, Towne and Stanford avenues.
This magnificent property, lying in the heart of the city, but ten minutes' walk from the Courthouse, must commend itself to all classes of investors, from its proximity to the business center, which is every day growing in this direction. The new postoffice within 4 short blocks.
The New Arcade Depot.
A grant of land 300x1900 feet, fronting Alameda street, between Fourth and Sixth streets, has been made by the owners to the Southern Pacific Railroad on the specific contract on the part of the railroad, with the signature of its President, Hon. Leland Stanford, that it shall at once erect and maintain IN PERPETUITY THEIR PRINCIPAL PASSENGER DEPOT on this property. The contract on the part of the railroad company is being faithfully executed. Side tracks and switch privileges have been granted by the Honorable Board of Common Council, and have been constructed. Work on the depot foundation is in progress and will be completed by December 1st.
Mr. Arthur Brown, the architect and Superintendent of construction of Del Monte Hotel, Monterey, states that he turns over to the company that hotel on Thanksgiving Day, at the dedication of that structure. At once thereafter the force of mechanics will be transferred to this work. The ground plans and elevation of this depot, one of the finest in the world, are now on view at our office. The building will be 507 4-12 feet long and 141 feet wide; the main approach and entrance facing Fifth street and Wolfskill avenue, the trains entering the depot from Alameda side. The building will be constructed of brick, stone, iron, glass, and fittings in natural wood, and will be one of the finest structures of the kind in America, being completed with every convenience for the traveling public.
SPECIAL NOTE—We have placed the opening schedule of prices at a minimum figure and about one-half of quotations for adjacent properties. These prices will be maintained FOR A SHORT TIME ONLY, and we shall advance the schedule as improvements progress. The first increase will probably be from 10 to 20 per cent.
Improvements on the Property.
All the streets leading from the center of the city are now being opened, with continuation of official lines of main thoroughfares maintained. Gravel-work already done on Fifth street, and contracts for stone walks let, with work under way, being but the beginning of vigorous work on all streets and avenues of a same character. The original zanja through the property all being piped.
All the street car lines have applied for franchises to approach the station, which are being granted, and the owners are in full accord with all public privileges by the Honorable Board of Common Council. There are already constructed through the property, and tracks laid, the Central avenue line and Third street line, franchises having been granted on Fifth street and Fourth street under an express clause in the franchise that work shall commence as early as practicable. This virtually places all car lines in direct connection with this principal depot.
We take pleasure in presenting this magnificent property to investors of all classes, and feel sure it cannot fail to commend itself for the advantages it possesses. For availability to the business center, combined with the fact that the schedule of prices is about one-half of that placed on any property in the vicinity.
SPECIAL CREDIT TERMS—One-third cash, one-third in six months, one-third in twelve months. Interest 8 per cent. per annum.

GOOD SPORT IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

Hunting the Black-Tailed Deer—Climbing Through the Grease-Wood—Among the Cañons of the Sierra Madres.

It is not too much to say that several thousand gentlemen go to Florida every winter for the sport alone; the fishing and sea-fowl shooting being the main attraction; while puma and bear constitute the large game. "I would much prefer," said a sportsman to the writer, "to spend my winters in Southern California, but you have no game." That this impression has gone out about this section, or exists, is due to the fact that comparatively little interest is taken in field sports here. In other words, there are few hunts or organized clubs for the purposes of legitimate sport, and the methods and ways of hunters here have not been written up in the East. In point of fact, all things considered, there is no better sport to be found than within a radius of 100 miles of Los Angeles, or in the county limits. Within five miles of the city quail, duck and geese are to be had, and over among the hills deer, an occasional grizzly, mountain lion and fox are found. No matter how good a shot the eastern hunter may be, or how much experience he may have had, in Southern California he will find something new to learn. This is particularly true of deer or quail shooting. The open season for deer is now from July 1st to December 15th (the killing of does being unlawful), and embraces some of the warmest and most delightful portions of the year. After a rain is the most propitious time, when the dampened earth bears the clear-cut imprint of the deer's foot and holds the scent. Now the slopes of the Sierrias and the deep cañons have taken on new-born tints of green, the dust has been washed from the air, and the view that stretches away down the San Gabriel is one from which Turner might have received his inspiration. At such a time, as the sun rises over the range, chasing the shadows from cañon to cañon, the deer-stalker should be at his post, well into the range. The trail leads up the slope by gentle turns, so that one may ride to the very summit on horse-back. On either side the expanse of grease-wood and manzanita stretches away, almost impenetrable one would think, yet in this mass of green hides the black-tailed deer, safe from all but human foes. The horses are left upon the summit or at some convenient spot and the hunters detailed to the peaks and ridges overlooking the cañon.

Having an especially good climber on such a hunt I rode along a narrow hog-back, the horse pushing his way through the bush by mere force of weight, until I found myself on a peninsula that stretched out into a sea of green. A deep cañon extended up each side, so deep that objects at the bottom appeared small indeed. Here was Nature's stronghold. The breeze from the distant sea came fitfully over the range, bending the sycamores far below, while the only sounds came from the thrush and mocking-bird that with occasional loud notes rose and dived away into the depths below. On the distant ridges, a quarter of a mile away as the crow flies, the occasional flash of the sun upon a rifle was seen, telling of other [illegible] upon the alert, but there was [illegible] causes the blood to [illegible] veins of every lov[illegible]. It was the deep bay of a [illegible]w low, then quickening, joined by others until a burst of canine music broke from the depths of the cañon, reverberating away among the hills, a welcome and inspiriting sound. It told the story of a fresh scent. Louder grew the baying; quicker it came, until all seemed to blend into a series of quick yelps. A moment later a small reddish brown form dashed from cover on the eastern slopes. Along it ran, where there was to all intents and purposes no foothold, the dogs tumbling after, falling over the rocks, becoming entangled in the brush, and yelping in their rage. Then began the crack of rifles that with their echoes appeared like a fusilade. The gamey animal is down, now up again, struggling on to fall beneath a well-directed shot of the master of the hunt, who dashes down into the cañon screaming to the dogs. Before he reaches them the animal is up and away again. I ply my rifle as fast as the magazine will work, but firing at an animal that looks about as large as a dog, across a deep cañon, is uncertain work. Down it goes again, a final struggle, and the hunter, now at the bottom of the cañon, reaches it and puts it out of its misery. Packing the animal—a fine doe—down into the cooler portions of the cañon, the dogs having rested, the ascent is made again. Now we stand on the very summit of the Verdugo Mountains. The view alone repays the climb. Far to the east rise the snow-capped peaks of Old Baldy, San Jacinto, and Santa Ana. Almost at our feet, wreathed in smoke, the City of the Angeles reaches away to the sea. The cañons wind away like green rivers, telling of the mighty power of water poured down by the winter rains. The ascent from the ridge here into the valley is so steep that no horse could accomplish it; so the hunters and dogs creep down the trails made by the deer and coyotes, and out upon the great ridges that appear to be the veritable ribs of the range. In the depths of the cañons, where basins are formed, filled with underbrush, the deer lurk, and as into one of these nooks the dogs burst, their melodious baying again broke the stillness. A moment later a buck, mad with terror, broke from the cover and rushed around the edge of the cañon. Crack! went the rifles again, and amid the yells of the master of the hounds, the baying of the dogs, the animal went down, hit by several bullets, missed its footing, and so rolled down the face of the precipice with an avalanche of rock and gravel. Near here in the cañon a fine buck was seen, killed some weeks before, and probably lost by the sportsmen.

"I saw a curious sight over beyond here some years ago," said one of the party as we slid and walked down the mountain. "The men were then working on an old trail which they expected to run clear through the mountain, and I was in the gang. I was on the up end, and generally the last to come out, and one night as I came down rather late I started into a sort of a jog trot. There was one part of the trail that was cut out of the solid rock, you might say, only about three feet wide, with as ugly a fall as you would want to make. I went along with my shovel over my shoulder thinking of dinner mostly, turned into the narrow part of the trail, and was just about to slacken up when I came to with a jerk. First I thought I had run against the mountain, but I was nearly sent off the edge by something, and I grabbed at it instinctively, and when I recovered my senses I found that I was holding a buck by the horns, and he was standing over me so closely that I could feel his hot breath in my face. For a moment I did not move; then the brute gave a jerk backward that fairly lifted me on to my feet, and the next moment we were both over the edge and rolling downward, crashing through the brush. I lost the buck on the way, and when I came too, an hour or so after, it was moonlight, and I was so sore and bruised that I could hardly move. But I managed to reach the bottom of the cañon, and found the camp with no one but the cook there; the boys had all gone back to look for me. I didn't move for weeks. I hit my head on something going down, and it resulted in brain fever. The deer they found astride of a big pine with its neck broken. That's the first and only time I ever tried to tackle a deer single-handed. It was all an accident, of course; the buck happened to be going around, and we met midway. There was another such experience on the trail some years later. A German was at work well up, and coming down one night he came suddenly upon a big grizzly bear with two cubs; the old one did not stand upon the order of going, but made a rush, and as he turned she struck him such a blow that it knocked him fairly into the air, giving him a bad cut. He rolled down the bush as I did," continued the speaker, "and the mountains saw him no more. He had all he wanted, and nothing could induce him to go up the trail again."

The deer found in Southern California are known as the black-tailed deer, while two other species are sometimes seen; one of which is the famous mule deer. The black-tailed deer, contrary to report, is fine eating, and having shot it yourself adds greatly to the flavor.

To make a success of this sport the hunt should be made up of a dozen or more, and at least that number of good fox or deer hounds are required. Without dogs it is a fruitless task, as the game seeks the thickest cover, where it is almost impossible for a man to go. The only chance of getting a shot lies in the fact that the hounds will run the animals out, and when they skirt the sides of the cañon an opportunity is offered that is a test for good shots. Sportsmen should be stationed on all the peakes or ridges that command a view of the coñons and slopes, so that the deer may be seen as they run out.

While deer shooting in the Sierra Madres requires good climbing and no little endurance on those who attempt it without a horse, it has one element that commends itself to every sportsman. The deer has a fair chance for its life, and only a good shot can hit the fleet animal as it skirts the sides of rocky cañons. To climb the mountains and foothills without a horse, will fatigue the hardiest eastern climber, and should not be attempted. [illegible] good trails leading [illegible] Verdugo Cañon, and reached in an hour and a half from Los Angeles. As for the deer shooting here, I have known a sportsman to run out ten in a forenoon. A week later not one could be found. This trail for a horse that has done some mountain work is fair for two-thirds the ascent; after that the writer put his trust in Providence on a certain memorable occasion, clasped arms about the horse's neck and literally butted through the bush for 500 feet, ultimately reaching the summit. Above all things, the green hand should not try experiments in coming down. The slopes from a distance look like easy descents, but a close examination will prove them to be extremely dangerous for horse and rider. A fine trail leads into the hills from Linda Vista, near Pasadena, and the trails up the Arroyo Seco and at the Geddings ranch, all lead by easy stages into the deer country. If no game is to be had, the view obtained from these elevations amply repays one for the climb. The stretch of country, the mountains snow-capped, the miles of orange groves and the distant ocean constitutes a sight to be seen nowhere else.

LA PRESA!

The Beautiful Swiss Village on Lake Como

BEING REPRODUCED IN SAN DIEGO.

The most novel thing yet undertaken in the development of this southern country is now being done at LA PRESA, nine miles from San Diego. The plan is to reproduce in that delightful spot the counterpart of the celebrated Swiss village on Lake Como, in Northern Italy. To this end a railroad is being built to the place, and a fine modern hotel is to be erected at once. The situation is most delightful; far enough removed from the sea to escape rough winds, yet near enough to be always cool. With pure water, fine scenery, and the best of soil, LA PRESA is just the place to invest for a quick turn with big profits. LA PRESA is sure to grow rapidly, as it has all the elements to attract a select class of settlers.

Lots are Sold for the Low Price of $100 to $125 Each.

NYE AS A SCIENTIST.

ALARMED ABOUT THE FUTURE OF THE HUMAN RACE.

Effect of Custom—What Is the Coming Man to Look Like?—Thinking Will Eventually Be Done on the Syndicate Plan.

[New York World.]

Without wishing to alarm the American people, or create a panic, I desire briefly and seriously to discuss the great question, "Whither are we drifting" and what is to be the condition of the coming man? We cannot shut our eyes to the fact that mankind is passing through a great era of change; even womankind is not built as she was a few brief years ago. And is it not time, fellow-citizens, that we paused to consider what is to be the future of the American?

Food itself has been the subject of change both in the matter of material and preparation. This must affect the consumer in such a way as to some day bring about great changes. Take, for instances, the oyster, one of our comparatively modern food and game fishes, and watch the effects of science upon him. At one time the oyster broused around and ate what he could find in Neptune's backyard, and we had to take him as we found him. Now, we take a herd of oysters off the trail, all run down, and feed them artificially till they swell up to a fancy size and bring a fancy price. Now, where will all this lead at last? I ask as a careful scientist. Instead of eating apples as Adam did we work the fruit up into applejack and pie, while even the simple oyster is perverted, and instead of allowing him to fatten up in the fall on acorns and ancient mariners, flesh is artificially put on his bones by the artificial osmose and dialysis of our advanced civilization. How can you make an oyster stout or train him down by making him jerk a health lift so many hours every day, or cultivate his body at the expense of his mind, without ultimately not only impairing the future usefulness of the oyster himself, but at the same time affecting the future of the human race?

I only use the oyster as an illustration, and I do not wish to cause alarm, but I say that if we stimulate the oyster artificially and swell him up by scientific means we not only do so at the expense of his better nature and keep him away from his family, but we are making our mark on the future race of men. Oyster-fattening is now, of course, in its infancy. Only a few years ago an effort was made to fatten cove oysters at St. Louis while in the can, but the system was not well understood, and those who had it in charge only succeeded in making the can itself more plump. But now oysters are kept on ground feed and given nothing to do for a few weeks, and even the older and overworked, sway-backed [illegible] oysters of the dim [illegible] made to fill out, in the waist[illegible] speak only of the [illegible] one of the objec[illegible] and science has turned [illegible] and I assert with the [illegible] dence that the time will [illegible] science should get a setback [illegible], and present hunting-case oyster [illegible] place to the open-faced oyster, [illegible] on the octopus and big enough to feed a hotel. Further than that, the oyster of the future will carry in a hip pocket a flask of vinegar, half a dozen lemons and two little Japanese bottles, one of which will contain salt and the other pepper, and there will be some way provided by which you can tell which is which. But are we improving the oyster now? That is a question we may well ask ourselves. Is this a healthy fat which we are putting on him or is it bloat? And what will be the result in the home life of the oyster? We take him from all home influences whatever in order to make a swell of him by our modern methods, but do we improve his condition morally, and what is to be the great final result on man?

The reader will see by the questions I ask that I am a true scientist. Give me an overcoat pocket full of lower-case interrogation marks and a medical report to run to, and I can speak on the matter of science and advancement till reason totters on her throne.

But food and oysters do not alone affect the great, pregnant future. Our race is being tampered with not only by means of adulterations, political combinations and climatic changes, but even our methods of relaxation are productive of peculiar physical conditions, malformations, and some more things of that kind.

Cigarette-smoking produces a flabby and endogenous condition of the optic nerve, and constant listening at a telephone, and always with the same ear gradually decreases the power of the other ear, till it finally just stands around drawing its salary, but actually refusing to hear anything. Carrying an eight-pound cane makes a man lopsided, and the muscular and nervous strain that is necessary to retain a single eyeglass and keep it out of the soup, year after year, draws the mental stimulus that should go to the thinker itself, until at last the mind wanders away and forgets to come back, or becomes atrophied, and the great mental strain incident to the work of pounding sand or coming in when it rains is more than it is equal to Playing billiards, accompanied by the vicious habit of pounding on the floor with the butt of the cue ever and anon, produces at last optical illusions, phantasmagora and visions of pink spiders with navy blue abdomens. Base-ball is not alone highly injurious to the umpire, but it also induces crooked fingers, bone spavin, and hives among habitual players. Jumping the rope induces heart-disease. Poker is unduly sedentary in its nature. Bicycling is highly injurious, especially to skittish horses. Boating induces malaria. Lawn-tennis cannot be played in the house. Archery is injurious to those who stand around and watch the game, and pugilism is a relaxation that jars heavily on some natures.

Foot-ball produced what may be called the endogenous or ingrowing toe-nail, stringhalt, and mania. Copenhagen induces melancholy, and the game of bean-bags is unduly exciting. Horse-racing is too brief and transitory as an outdoor game, requiring weeks and months for preparation and lasting only long enough for a quick person to ejaculate "Scat!" The pitcher's arm is a new disease, the outgrowth of base-ball; the lawn-tennis elbow is another result of a popular open-air game, and it begins to look as though the coming American would hear with one overgrown telephonic ear, while the other will be rudimentary only. He will have an abnormal base-ball arm with a lawn-tennis elbow, a powerful, football-kicking leg with the superior toe driven back into the palm of his foot. He will have a highly-trained biceps muscle over his eye to retain his glass, and that eye will be trained to shoot a curved glance over a high hat and witness anything on the stage.

Other features will grow abnormal or shrink up from lack of use as a result of our customs. For instance, the man whose business it is to get along a crowded street with the utmost speed will have, finally, a hard, sharp horn growing on each elbow and a pair of spurs growing out of each ankle. These will enable him to climb over a crowd and get there early. Constant exposure to these weapons on the part of the pedestrian will harden the walls of the thorax and abdomen until the coming man will be an impervious man. The citizen who avails himself of all modern methods of conveyance will ride from his door on the horse-car to the elevated station, where an elevator will elevate him to the train, a revolving platform will swing him on board, or possibly the street-car will be lifted from the surface track to the elevated track, and the passenger will retain his seat all the time. Then a man will simply hang out a red card, like an express card, at his door, and a combination car will call for him, take him to the nearest elevated station, elevate him, car and all, to the track, take him where he wants to go, and call for him at any hour of the night to bring him home. He will do his exercising at home, largely, taking artificial sea baths, jerking a rowing machine or playing on a a health lift till his eyes hang out on his cheeks, and he need not do any walking whatever. In that way the coming man will be overdeveloped above the legs and his lower limbs will look like the desolate stems of a frozen geranium. Eccentricities of limb will be handed over like baldness from father to son among the dwellers in the cities, where every advantage in the way of rapid transit is to be had, until a metropolitan will be instantly picked out by his able digestion and rudimentary legs, just as we now detect the gentleman from the interior by his wild endeavors to overtake an elevated train.

In fact, Mr. Edison has now perfected, or announces that he is on the road to the perfection of, a machine which I may be pardoned for calling a storage think-tank. This will enable a brainy man to sit at home, and, with an electric motor and a perfected phonograph, he can think into a tin dipper, or funnel, which will, by the aid of electricity and a new style of foil, record and preserve his ideas on a sheet of soft metal, so that when any one says to him, "A penny for your thoughts," he can [illegible] his valise and [illegible] his scholarship [illegible] mind. This is what small bright-eyed [illegible]

What makes the boy so loudly ——?
Because he wants to drink some ——.

The evening is so clear and ——,
We at the gate a while will ——.

The lady rested in a —— together will [illegible] her maid [illegible] fire it back at his friends in the morning while they eat their pancakes and glucose syrup from Vermont, or he can mail the sheet of tin-foil to absent friends, who may put it into their phonographs and utilize it. In this way the world may harness the gray matter of its best men, and it will be no uncommon thing to see a dozen brainy men tied up in a row in the back office of an intellectual syndicate dropping pregnant thoughts into a little electric coffee-mill for a couple of hours a day, after which they can put on their coats, draw their pay and go home.

All this will reduce the quantity of exercise, both mental and physical. Two men with good brains could do the thinking for 60,000,000 of people and feel perfectly fresh and rested the next day. Take four men, we will say, two to do the day thinking and two more to go on deck at night, and see how much time the rest of the world would have to go fishing. See how politics would become simplified. Conventions, primaries, bargains and sales, campaign bitterness and vituperation —all may be wiped out. A pair of political thinkers could furnish 100,000,000 of people with logical conclusions enough to last them through the campaign and put an unbiased opinion into a man's house for less than he now pays for gas. Just before election you could go into your private study, throw in a large dose of campaign whisky, light a campaign cigar, fasten your buttonhole to the wall by an electric band, so that there would be a gentle pull on it, and turn the electricity on your mechanical thought-supply. It would save time and money, and the result would be the same that it is now. This would only be the beginning, of course, and after a while every qualified voter who did not feel like exerting himself so much could give his name and proxy to the Salaried Thinker employed by the National Think Retort and Supply Works. We talk a great deal about the union of Church and State, but that is not so dangerous after all as the mixture of politics and independent thought. Will the coming voter be an automatic, legless, hairless mollusk with an abnormal ear constantly glued to the tube of a big tank full of symmetrical ideas furnished by a national bureau of brains in the employ of the party in power?
